New Money Is Demanded By Senators In Gold Bill

Borah Plans Amendment to Make Inflation Mandatory.

Wheeler to Insist On Silver Buying

Measure Debated Whole Day; Limit on Life of Law May Win.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

No sooner had the Administration made slight concessions yesterday over its gold revaluation bill in an effort to appease Senate conservatives than a left-wing movement rapidly crystallized demanding amendment of the measure to make currency inflation mandatory.

The aim of this movement, which was attracting Western Senators, is to force the Treasury to utilize, in the form of a currency issue, that part of the profit resulting from dollar devaluation aside from the $2,000,000,000 appropriated to establish a stabilization fund.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, started preparation of an amendment to bring about this end after Administration spokesmen insisted the bill would not result in currency inflation and after other Senators had said expansion of the currency under the bill was discretionary with the President and Secretary of the Treasury.

Borah Seeks Vote Today.

Working with Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, Senator Borah proposes to offer his amendment today and to force a vote. It will be a test of whether President Roosevelt wants currency inflation. These two Senators expressed the conviction that unless there is currency inflation, there would be no substantial rise in commodity prices.

At the same time Senator Wheeler will try to force a vote on his proposal that the Secretary of the Treasury be required to purchase silver in the open market until he acquires 1,000,000,000 ounces or until the price, in fact, reaches a ratio of 16 to 1 with gold. Silver would have to sell at $2.15 an ounce to reach a ratio of 16 to 1 with the present gold price of $34.45 an ounce. Silver, aside from that newly mined, was quoted yesterday at 44¼ cents an ounce.

Although there is a strong sentiment for adoption of one or the other of these proposals, it remains doubtful in the face of opposition from President Roosevelt whether either could muster a Senate majority. Nevertheless presentation of the two proposals will inspire lively Senate fights.

Bill Debated for Day.

Greece Hands Hat to Insull

Fugitive Utilities Man Must Go by Feb. 1 or Be Ousted by Police.

Athens, Jan. 24 (AP).—The supreme State council and the minister of the interior agreed today that Samuel Insull must leave Greece before February 1 and seek a new refuge from American attempts to extradite him.

The council rejected the former Chicago utilities operator's plea to stay longer than January 31 and ordered him to pay the costs of recent proceedings so as to "maintain the existing good relations between the United States and Greece."

Where Insull will go was a matter of conjecture. His doctor says he is too ill, with a weak heart, to travel, but Minister of Interior Moutzouriolis declared that "if Insull does not make a move by January 31 the Greek police will conduct him over the border."

Reports have circulated that the once wealthy Chicagoan, whose return to Cook County, Ill., has been sought in vain twice on charges in connection with the failure of his utilities empire, may seek a retreat in the Island of Rhodes in the Aegean Sea, Albania, England, or other places.

"He has not notified the government of his illness, but if he does, and a government doctor says it is dangerous for his health to travel, the time will be prolonged, Moutzouriolis said. "Otherwise he will be deported on February 1 if he does not leave voluntarily by January 31."

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 24 (AP). Turkish diplomats warned today that Samuel Insull's passport would not be visaed if he should apply for permission to enter Turkey.

$200 Found—Boys Roam.

Chicago, Jan. 24 (AP).—With $200 found in a pocketbook on the street, Clement Kairustis, 12, and John Avenick, 16, of Philadelphia, who said they had decided to go to California to see motion picture stars, were held in the juvenile home today.

Girl, 8, Honored With 14 Others For Heroic Acts

Pittsburgh, Jan. 24 (AP).—An 8-year-old girl and a newspaper publisher, who gave his life, are among 15 persons awarded medals today by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Thirteen bronze medals and two of silver were approved. Dependents of four of the dead heroes were given pensions aggregating $3,240 a year.

Lucy Evans August, of Superior, Wis., 8, rescued Richard C. Glover, 14, from drowning in Lake Nebagamon, Wis., August 14, 1932.

Robert S. Wilson, of Rock Springs, Wyo., publisher, drowned attempting to rescue Frances A. Gilensek, 16, at Pinedale, Wyo., July 19, 1931. She was saved by another man.

Six of the heroes lost their lives.

Klorer Yields To Walmsley; Waives Runoff

Long Candidate Loses by 15,000; New Orleans Regulars Win.

New Orleans, Jan. 24 (AP).—John Klorer, Senator Huey P. Long's candidate, who trailed Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley for mayor in yesterday's city primary by more than 15,000 votes, announced tonight he would not force a second primary in the three-way race.

The Klorer announcement settled the issue against a second primary after a bitter campaign and insured Walmsley a second four-year term.

Klorer's statement, addressed "to the citizens of New Orleans," follows:

"Some time after I declared for a drastic reduction in electric rates in New Orleans, the present city administration announced that it would pass such an ordinance within 30 days."

His Only Object.

"The accomplishment of this object would constitute the principal reason for me remaining in the contest.

"I am going to take them at their word and not run in the second primary. I wish them good luck."

Walmsley was backed by his old regular organization, which, on January 3, adopted resolutions resigning themselves to the task of "exterminating" Senator Long from public life.

Francis Williams, the third ranking candidate on the face of nearly complete returns, ran independently, opposing both Walmsley and Klorer.

With only seven precincts missing out of 262, Walmsley had a lead of 15,638 votes over Klorer. The count was Walmsley, 46,298; Klorer, 30,660, and Williams, 26,070.

Herbert Homes, a nonfactional candidate, ran fourth with only 509 votes in these precincts.

District Attorney Eugene Stanley, indorsed by both the Williams and Walmsley organizations, received a clear majority over his two opponents with a total of 60,183 votes.

A. G. Williams, a brother of Francis Williams, indorsed by the Long ticket for district attorney, was given 34,106 votes in the 255 precincts. Richard A. Dowling, Independent, polled 5,785 votes.

Two Commissioners in Clear.

Two old regular city commissioners also won renomination in the field of 12 seeking four commission posts. These were A. Miles Pratt and Joseph P. Skelly. The other two old regular commissioners rand third and fourth, short of clear majorities, followed by the Long aspirants, Williams' men running third.

Yesterday's results marked the first defeat for Long-indorsed candidates in any Louisiana election in six years. Together, the old regulars and the Long political machine have put over many smashing victories, the last being the election of John Overton to the Senate in 1932. Political observers attached much significance to the fact that the old regulars ran far in front when the two groups fell out.

Raskob Thrills Texas Town, Tipping Waitress

Sonora, Tex., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—This south Texas plains town returned to normalcy today after the "thrill of a lifetime."

John J. Raskob, former Democratic leader traveling overland to California, supplied the thrill when after eating he tendered Miss Eleanor Hanson, waitress, a $20 bill with the words" keep the change."

Drugs Seized In New York Prison Raid

Gangsters Are Found in Charge; Guns Taken; Warden Ousted.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—An assortment of narcotics and weapons was confiscated in a surprise raid today on Welfare Island Penitentiary by the city's new corruption commissioner, who said he found a group of prisoners living in "country club" style.

Commissioner Austin H. MacCormick, heading an unscheduled inspection tour of the prison, discovered drugs, carrier pigeons and special foods at the disposal of many inmates.

Afterward he denounced conditions on the inside as "the worst in the world."

MacCormick's dramatic appearance created an uproar among the inmates. They hurled missiles at him and screamed, but as a systematic search was begun they quieted down.

After uncovering what he termed evidence that the penitentiary was under the domination of a clique of "big shot" gangsters, MacCormick relieved Warden Joseph A. McCann of his duties and placed Deputy Warden Daniel Feehan under "military arrest."

Drugs and Weapons Found.

MacCormick, who was accompanied by four detectives, declared he found narcotics, hypodermics, knives, razors, iron pipes and a hatchet during his search of the prison, which was built to hold 1,368 inmates and now contains 1,658.

In what he termed the "politicians' ward," MacCormick said he found a group of arrogant convicts whom he called the "toughest" in the prison, living in what almost amounted to luxury. These included Joie Rao, former policy racketeer.

Court Asked to Free Jailed Americans

Pardon Sought for 4 in Spanish Prison.

Madrid, Jan. 24 (AP).—The attorney general of Spain recommended to the supreme court today a pardon for four Americans held in jail at Palma Mallorca, for assaulting a civil guard.

The Americans are Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood, of West Springfield, Mass.; Roger F. Mead, of New York, and Edmund A. Blodgett, of Stamford, Conn.

They have been held in custody at Palma since last Sunday.

Man Kills Wife, Five Children; Hangs Self

Charleroi, Belgium, Jan. 24 (AP).—Edmond Gray killed his wife and five children with a hatchet and then hanged himself in nearby Berzee today.

Reich Fiscal Policy Rift Rumors Grow

Berlin, Jan. 24 (AP).—Dr. Hjalmar Schact, president of the Reichsbank, left Berlin unexpectedly tonight as representatives of foreign holders of German securities prepared to meet at his invitation tomorrow to protest against a Reichsbank order reducing interest amounts that can be transferred abroad.

In banking circles his departure was cited to substantiate rumors of friction between the German cabinet and officials of the German Central Bank, who recently cut foreign interest and amortization payments from 50 to 30 per cent.

Allen W. Dulles, formerly of the American State Department, and Laird Bell, of Chicago, representing American investors owning more than $700,000,000 in German securities, prepared for tomorrow's scheduled meeting by reviewing the exemption of Dutch and Swiss investors from the order—a point on which particular opposition has developed among American and British agents.

U. S. Protests Studied.

The German foreign office, meanwhile, studied an answer to two notes given it by American Ambassador William E Dodd on January 2 and January 19.

The communications were understood to have protested energetically against the "discriminations in favor of the Swiss and Dutch creditors" in the matter of the moratorium on transfers.

Reliable information in banking circles was that the Dutch and Swiss holders would receive scrip in the next six months, the same as other creditors, but will be allowed to apply the scrip in payment for certain categories of imports from Germany.

Under the terms of the purported Swiss-Dutch agreement, the nationals of those countries holding German securities or bonds will receive 100 per cent of their monies, although others, under the new 30 per cent transfer system, will receive but 65 per cent—30 per cent cash and 35 per cent additional by discounting 70 per cent in scrip by one-half.

Official Answer Waited.

Following Mr. Dodd's visit to the foreign office, Reichsbank officials answered the American Government's protest in behalf of the Reichsbank, but the government at a late hour tonight had not officially answered the notes.

One of the points made in the representations was that German debtors have been buying their own securities in New York under par with "inflated" dollars and with a considerable saving in interest and amortization charges.

A problem confronting the foreigners is to convince the Reichsbank and Dr. Schacht, that German finances will permit a transfer of more than 30 per cent ordered in a decree of last December 18.

Dr. Schacht declared that transferring 30 per cent for the next six months would force the Reichsbank to obtain 11,000,000 marks monthly to make the transfer in view of falling German export trade.

Yellow River's Sudden Flood Drowns Hundreds

Shanghai, Jan. 24 (AP).—Several hundred persons were drowned and 4,000 made homeless by a sudden rise of the Yellow River in southern Hopei Province.

The flood came without warning. Thousands climbed housetops and trees in a frantic effort to escape the swirling waters, choked with ice cakes. Chinese relief agencies rushed assistance.

Trapped in Blinding Blizzard, Boy, 12, Saves Sisters and Self

Winnipeg, Jan. 24 (AP).—Lost in a blizzard, unable to see through the swirling snow, two little girls, en route to school, were saved by heroism and resourcefulness of their 12-year-old brother.

With his two sisters, Pauline, 8, and Mary, 14, Vernon Stifle found all signs of road blocked out by snow shortly after they started to school near Hanna, Alberta, 3 miles away.

Trained to the danger of walking in a circle in a snowstorm, the boy decided on a plan. Joining hands with his sisters and quieting their fears, he kept them trudging until they felt the welcome touch of a fence against their bodies.

Vernon then used the fence as a guide. Plunging through ever-deepening drifts, but with the driving snow at their backs, the children followed the fence for 3 miles.

Stopping only to rest, the three came at least to the prairie home of J. Kaemp—and safety.

Except for slight frost bite, the storm victims, children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stifle, of Sunnynoon, Alberta, showed little signs of their struggle.

Full Pay Cut Restoration Seen July 1

5 Per Cent Now, Ten in Summer, Hoped Under New Proposal.

Base Also Broadened for Determining Future Salary Returns.

Restoration of 5 per cent of their salaries immediately and 10 per cent effective July 1, was forecast yesterday as the minimum Government workers will get out of the salary cut fight being waged in the Senate.

The forecast was based on a new proposal submitted by Democratic leaders to pay-cut opponents. Their proposal also included a broadening of the base for determining future restorations. Previously, Administration lieutenants had offered a 5 per cent increase and a broadened determining base.

Those advocating returning Government salaries to statutory levels, prominent among whom has been Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, have not bound themselves to acept the latest proposal of the leaders, but indications were many were inclined to accept rather than force an open battle out of which they might not get as much.

McCarran in "Driver's Seat."

Senator McCarran occupies a strategic position in the fight because of his membership on the appropriations subcommittee, considering the Independent Offices appropriation bill, embodied in which is the salary and economy program recommended by President Roosevelt.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, has undertaken to handle negotiations for the Administration. He was in almost constant discussion with other Senators throughout the day in an effort to line up sufficient strength to put over the latest compromise plan.

Senator McCarran and others, however, are holding out for full restoration, effective July 1, in addition to the 5 per cent return now. They believe they have a chance of winning.

Subcommittee Meets Today.

The subcommittee, of which Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, is chairman, is to meet this morning to hear Senator David A. Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, and representatives of various veterans organizations. They want greater increases in payments and care of veterans than is provided in the recent Executive order of the President.

Although consideration of the bill had threatened to drag out for several days, the apparent imminence of agreement on the pay question makes it probable the subcommittee may finish its work by tomorrow and report the bill to the full committee.

"Vigorous" condemnation of continued pay cuts was expressed in a resolution unanimously adopted by the National executive council of the American Federation of Labor in a general conference yesterday.

"Unjust Discrimination."

The council described the wage cut policy "as an illogical and unjust discrimination against Government workers and as offering an excuse to chiseling employers."

Government "wage cutting," the council said, "constituted a distinct handicap to efforts to increase consumer buying power, through higher wages, which is the cornerstone of the recovery program."

British Admirals Continue Parley

Secrecy Shrouds Meeting at Singapore.

Singapore, Straits Settlements, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Augmented by the participation of Sir John Alleyne, commanding the Singapore dockyards, the "admirals' conference" continued here on board the British cruiser Kent in the greatest secrecy.

The admirals, chiefs of British fleets in Asiatic and Australian waters, conferred all day.

Prisoners Will Race Hounds for Liberty

Miami, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—Dade County track dogs need a few workouts, so some prisoners are going to be given a chance to escape—maybe.

Inmates who have only a short time more to serve will be taken to the city limits and set free. Later, the dogs will be put on their trails.

If they elude the hounds, the men won't have to come back.

New Arrest Here Spurs Inquiry of CWA Graft; Work May Be Extended

President Signs D. C. Rum Bill

Amendment of the new District liquor control law was recommended to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The recommendation was made in a special message in which the President said he had signed the bill as passed, "rather than delay putting it into effect by returning it to Congress for amendment, meanwhile postponing approval."

The amendments were proposed in memoranda given the President by Attorney General Henry S. Cummings and Joseph H. Choate, Federal alcohol control administrator.

They were not regarded as of sufficient importance by members of the House and Senate District Committees and District officials to cause any delay in operation of the law and the flow of legal liquor in the National Capital.

Board Naming Due Today.

Formal appointment of the District alcohol beverage control board is expected to be made by the Commissioners today after consultation with William W. Bride, corporation counsel, and Vernon T. West, principal assistant, who played a major part in preparation of the measure.

George W. Offutt, Mrs. W. Beverly Mason and Isaaac Gans have been announced by the Commissioners as their choices for the board. An appropriation for work of the board is in the hands of the Budget Bureau.

District officials went forward yesterday with drafting the details of regulations left up to them under the broad provisions of the bill.

Liquor may be sold legally in the District two weeks after formal notice has been given of the first application. The law requires public notice of applications for that time.

Proposed Amendments.

None of the amendments proposed by the Attorney General or Mr. Choate struck at the heart or intent of the bill. One objection expressed by the former was that the bill contained no saving clause subordinating its provisions to codes of fair competition where there is inconsistency between the law and code. Mr. Choate concurred in this.

Another section of the bill "would seem to require that every purchaser and consumer of liquor should obtain a license," the Attorney General said, but he added "clearly that is not the intent of the bill." District officials said they would proceed with administration of the law without requiring licenses from consumers or purchasers, except those buying liquor for resale.

The law reads that "owners of a majority of the real property" within 600 feet of a place for which a license is sought may forbid issuance of a license. The Attorney General said it wasn't clear whether the law meant what is said or meant that a majority of the owners of real etsate within the area could forbid a license. Members of the committees laughed at that objection, saying the purpose of the law had been clearly set forth.

The provision prohibiting members and employes of the beverage

First Time "Bad Enough;" Judge Weds 'Em Free!

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 24 (AP).—A new system of fees for marriages has been worked out by Justice John H. Duncan.

"If a couple never has been married before," says Judge Duncan, "I may marry them free. They are getting into it bad enough the way it is.

"But if the couple has been married before I charge them double price—at least $5. They ought to know better."

Johnson, Nye Bury Hatchet In NRA Row

Recent steps to calm senatorial criticism of the NRA, because of its alleged discrimination against the "little fellow," were augmented yesterday when Recovery Administrator Johnson visited one of his severest critics, Senator Nye, of North Dakota.

"There is every indication," said Senator Nye after a two-hour conference, "that the Administrator is ready to reconsider my original proposal that there be created in NRA a special board of outstanding citizens to which the small manufacturer and business men may present their complaints as to operation of the codes.

"Of course," declared Nye, who charged a few days ago that there are big business "stool pigeons" in the recovery administration, "this is highly gratifying."

Confers With Roosevelt.

Johnson then called on President Roosevelt. Leaving the White House, Johnson said: "We have worked it out satisfactorily from the standpoint of all parties, including the Administration. New legislation will not be necessary."

Thus, it appeared that peace had come to the NRA front, which had been the scene of conflict for some time. Senators Nye and Borah, pleading the cause of the "little fellow," had provoked a highly charged rejoiner from Johnson in a speech in which he referred to them as "political tom tom beaters" who sat on the sidelines instead of offering a helping hand.

President's Hand Seen.

Subsequently, however, it is suspected that Mr. Roosevelt himself intervened to soften the dispute. There were plans put forth to facilitate and safeguard handling of the "little fellow's" complaints, and work is now under way on a method of extending him credit. Two days ago Johnson visited Senator Norris, a leader in the Progressive group to which Senators Nye and Borah belong.

However, the Associated Press said Senator Borah was not as pleased as his brother independent Nye over the creation of a special board.

"Without restoring the antitrust law," he said, "a board will be utterly powerless to do anything.

"It's no use trying to bring about a remedy when you can't do it without restoring these laws. It will be just one more board."

Man Cries While Court Grants Fund—Can't Stop

Elmira, N. Y., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Lovell Short, of Little Marsh, Pa., was awarded $3,500 in Federal court because he can not stop crying.

Treasury Billion "Recovery" Loan Oversubscribed 3 Times

Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday announced that the first billion-dollar "recovery loan" of the Administration's $10,000,000,000 financing program had been oversubscribed three and a half times at 4 p. m.

"I am delighted with results," he declared, adding that the $500,000,000 in 2½ per cent Treasury notes had been oversubscribed five times, while subscriptions doubled an equal amount of certificates bearing 1½ per cent.

He said offers mailed up to midnight would be considered in allotting the securities. Final figures will show an even greater oversubscription, he added, since all returns were not in from the West, particularly San Francisco.

This reaction to the opening offering of the President's $10,000,000,000 borrowing by June 30 became even more significant when it was learned that the Federal Reserve Banks had not participated, even indirectly, in supporting either issue.

It was apparent that Mr. Morgenthau interpreted the response as further indication of public faith in the Government's credit.

The Treasury notes carrying the larger interest rate mature March 15, 1935, while the certificates of indebtedness fall due September 15.

So impressed was Mr. Morgenthau by the results that it was apparent the Treasury foresaw comparatively easy sledding for the remainder of its borrowing operations.

While a continuation of orthodox financing may be looked for from the success of the first venture, the Treasury yesterday continued its policy of offering 90-day bills in increasing amounts. Bids were invited on $150,000,000 of bills dated January 31, which will meet $80,180,000 in bills falling due the same day.

Further Arrests Are Expected Here

Roosevelt Ready to Seek 850 Millions More for Projects.

Plans for gradual rather than sudden abandonment of the CWA program were developing yesterday in the face of active propaganda for its continuance, and further evidence of graft and irregularities in its administration in various communities.

Developments included:

A second arrest in Washington of a CWA supervisor and indications that more arrests are imminent as police run down a long trail of reported irregularities.

Revelation that the White House has been receiving 200 to 300 letters a day complaining that city and State CWA offices have been used for building up political organizations and for petty graft, and that Harry L. Hopkins, CWA administrator, is receiving as many as 2,000 complaints daily.

A statement by Hopkins minimizing the graft charges and declaring his organization is determined to halt irregularities.

Politicians Forced Out.

Announcement from West Virginia that all persons having an official or active place in any political party will be removed from CWA jobs, followed by resignation of a prominent Republican official.

Preparation by President Roosevelt of a request for appropriations totaling $850,000,000, $350,000,000 for CWA and $500,000,000 for relief.

Intimation from the White House that some of the relief money could be diverted to CWA.

The second CWA worker arrested in Washington within 24 hours was Joe George McAlwee, 37, of 1735 Park road, a supervisor employed in connection with the rent survey. He was charged with "larceny by trick."

McAlwee, according to police, was the immediate superior of Thomas E. Archer, arrested on a similar charge Tuesday. Police charge that McAlwee and Archer extracted money from CWA employes on the promise of giving them high "efficiency ratings" to help them hold their jobs.

McAlwee was arrested in the office of James Ring, head of the rent survey. Ring had been asked by police to keep McAlwee at his office until an arrest could be made.

Following the second arrest, police said they have evidence that

Church Floor Falls; 50 Hurt

400 Plunged Into Debris; Ohio Ruins Searched for Bodies.

Portsmouth, Ohio, Jan. 24 (AP).—more than 50 persons were injured tonight when a floor collapsed in the Pentecostal Church at Sciotoville, a suburb, carrying 400 worshippers with it. The congregation was listening to a preacher when the floor of the building caved in.

Many of the injured were given first aid by firemen whose quarters adjoin the church, and then rushed to hospitals here. A score or more, however, were treated for their injuries in the fire house.

Firemen and volunteer workers dug into th wreckage to determine if any bodies remained there, but it was believed all of the injured had been removed.

Traylor's Condition Still Called Grave

Family Near; Heart Action Closely Watched.

Chicago, Jan. 24 (AP).—Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National Bank, was still in a grave condition today after he awoke from a sleep that had given his physicians hope that he would recover from pneumonia.

The patient, however, was "somewhat improved," one doctor said. Mrs. Traylor and the children, Nancy and Melvin, jr., who had flown here from Leland Stanford, Jr., University yesterday, were called to the bedside during the night, when Traylor seemed to be sinking.

The staff of five physicians has been watching carefully his heart action, weakened by the severe strain of influenza followed by pneumonia.

Belgrade Cabinet Quits.

End of Clashing Policy Is Next Recovery Step

Administration Seeks to Dove-Tail Agencies With Conflicting Aims.

By Raymond Clapper.

One of the big jobs ahead for the Administration is to readjust conflicts of policies which have developed under the new deal.

For instance, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, amid a burst of picturesque language, launched NRA partially to abolish cut-throat competition. Now he is under attack on the ground that NRA is encouraging monopoly and driving the little fellow out of business.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace tugged at his tousled hair as he set up the elaborate AAA plan to cut down farm production. Now the Senate Agricultural Committee has reported out a bill to appropriate $100,000,000 to finance seed loans to farmers, much of which will go to the struggling one-mule farmers who are living on the submarginal land. It is the very same land, in many instances, for which PWA has just set aside $25,000,000 to buy and take out of crop use.

Need of Speed Blamed.

Much of this was inevitable, according to the general feeling here, in the rush of the new Administration to attack the problem of recovery as fast and from as many directions as possible. Problems had to be met catch as catch can. Professors dug their lectures out of brief cases and in the twinkling of an eye they became law. Idea men in the Administration ground out new plans every hour on the hour. There was no time for coordination. It was felt that the thing to do was to get action and risk the dangers of mistakes and conflicting policies. That there would be many such instances was freely recognized.

Now comes the time for more considered shaking down and for gradually reconciling so far as possible the many diverse lines of action and for pulling the reins on the tendency to ride simultaneously in all directions.

Gen. Johnson made a step toward reconciling one of the big conflicts in NRA when he informed Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, that he was setting up a committee within the recovery organization to protect the little fellow against the big one. Next month further conflicts will be considered when code authorities handling some 200 codes meet here, in an attempt to work out a better dovetailing so that fewer toes will be stepped on.

Consumers Present Problem.

There also is the problem of the consumer, whose representatives in NRA have felt the atmosphere there rather frosty. They feel that prices have been allowed to outsoar the Blue Eagle. The Federal Government and State and local purchasing agents have complained of a virtual disappearance in some instances of competitive bidding. Some of them complain that profiteering prices are being charged. There is genuine concern among some in Congress lest NRA, which set out to bring recovery, may turn out to be bringing recovery chiefly to a quite select group of huge, highly organized major industries.

Another point of conflict is involved in the St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty which President Roosevelt is seeking to have ratified. Opponents assert that it merely would permit opening up of a water route to the Great Lakes in competition with the railroads, to which the RFC has loaned $400,000,000 in an effort to save them from the sheriff. This argument was pressed so strongly that the White House prepared an analysis of Interstate Commerce Commission data to show that if railroad traffic continued to increase at the rate which had obtained throughout this century, there would be plenty of business for both the roads and the waterway even if there isn't enough now for the railroads alone.

Farms a Puzzle.

Although the Administration is striving with the aid of millions of dollars to rescue agriculture from a 15-year collapse, the most glaring fact in the situation is that it has not been decided whether the country is going forward on a self-contained basis or whether it will try to be a great international trading Nation. Secretary Wallace complains in almost every speech that until this question is decided no intelligent farm policy can be worked out. If the country is going on a strictly domestic basis, one-seventh of the farm land will have to be taken out of production. If the direction is to be international, then American industry must be willing to let down the tariff wall to admit $1,000,000,000 of foreign goods every year to pay for exports from the United States.

While the decision on this fundamental matter is being made, stop-gap help is being given to keep body and soul together in the farm belt. First came the voluntary allotment plan. It was based on having low prices for crops and making up the difference with a benefit payment from Uncle Sam, raised out of proceeds from processing taxes. The theory seemed to be workable. Yet during the summer cotton farmers became restless, so the Administration lifted the price of cotton and pegged it at about 10 cents by making crop loans. When the farm strike developed in the Middle West, loans also were made on corn at 45 cents a bushel, also a price-pegging move.

Both moves were the result of political pressure, but both tended to break down the theory of a low price on which the AAA plan was based. The result is that farmers, finding prices, at least in cotton and corn, sufficient to bring a fair return, are tempted to break away from acreage-restriction pledges and to plant all they can. Thus the danger of another crop surplus becomes a real one.

Seed Loans Herald Surplus.

On top of that is the prospect that Congress will vote $100,000,000 for seed loans. This money goes to hard-pressed farmers, mostly on inferior land. Thus they are enabled to add to the production with a tendency to depress prices for all farmers.

While the Agriculture Department is spending $25,000,000 to buy up land and take it out of production, PWA is advancing millions to reclaim new land and develop irrigation for it. CWA is draining swamps, while the new Wild Life Reclamation Commission wants to save the swamps as nesting places for waterfowl.

All through the vast machinery, which has been set up hurriedly in the last few months, the Right Wing hasn't had time to find out what the Left Wing is doing. The time has come when they are beginning to get together and compare notes. Coordination of these conflicting activities is one of the next big efforts ahead.

Capital Forced to Fight Congress Incessantly For Funds to Keep Library From Extinction

Legislators Waited Till 1896 to Pass Needed Legislation.

By Felix Bruner.

The story of the Washington Public Library is a story of a continuous battle with Congress for sufficient appropriations to keep it alive.

Washington had no public library until 1896. If it had depended on Congress for action it might have been many more years before such a library was established. But two men stepped into the situation and assured Washington of a public library. One was Theodore W. Noyes. The other was Andrew Carnegie.

Mr. Noyes began agitation for a public library many years before the library became an accomplished fact. Since its establishment, he has headed the library board and, together with Librarian George F. Bowerman, has been responsible for such development as has been possible in the face of Congressional inertia and opposition.

In 1896 Congress passed a law creating a public library that should be "a supplement of the public educational system of said District." The act proposed the housing of the library, to the extent of 100,000 volumes, in a future municipal building.

First Grants Meager.

Then Congress all but forgot the library. At first there was no appropriation for its maintenance. Then exceedingly meager appropriations were made. Then Mr. Carnegie stepped into the situation and made the District a gift of $375,000 for the central building. It was opened in 1903. Previous to that date, the municipal building not materializing, the library was housed in rented quarters and supported partially by donations.

At the opening of the new building Mr. Carnegie offered to give Washington all the branch libraries it needed. The official record of Carnegie benefactions shows that $350,000 was to have been given for branch libraries in Washington. But Washington did not accept the gift. A bill providing for its acceptance was defeated in the Senate. It is estimated that at that time branch libraries could have been built at a cost of about $50,000 apiece. This gift would have given Washington seven branches at no more than the cost of the upkeep. That was more that 30 years ago. Today, Washington has only four branch libraries.

The fight in Congress continued. Not until 1911 did Congress agree to permit the District to accept a Carnegie gift. Then it authorized the building of the Takoma Park branch on a donated site. Mr. Carnegie had offered to give Washington seven branch libraries. Eight years after the offer was made Congress agreed to accept a gift of one branch. Objection was largely on the ground of the cost of upkeep.

Southeast Site Bought.

Following Mr. Carnegie's death, the Carnegie Corporation announced there would be no more gifts for libraries and the offer to Washington was withdrawn. Washington citizens and officials, however, succeeded in changing the ruling and obtaining further gifts. Congress was persuaded to appropriate $10,000 for a site for the Southeast branch and the Carnegie organization built the structure, which was opened in 1923.

Persons interested in Washington libraries continued to appeal to the Carnegie Corporation and finally obtained $200,000 for the Mount Pleasant branch. Congress appropriated $25,000 for the land and the branch was opened in 1925.

Then the Carnegie Corporation shut down on future gifts. It gave these reasons:

"Four buildings have been erected from Carnegie funds and have proved their usefulness in different parts of the city and in different social environments. In the light of this demonstration it ought not now to be difficult to secure funds from other sources for additional buildings as they are needed."

The justice of this decision could not be disputed, since for the original sites, buildings and equipment the Carnegie gifts had totaled $682,000 in contrast to appropriations of only $35,000 by Congress.

Then Congress passed a new library law. This law had two provisions, (1) approval of maintenance of branch libraries as well as a central library, and (2) transferring all library fines to the United States Treasury. The latter measure deprived the library of its only source of revenue outside of appropriations and the library organization hoped that Congress would take cognizance of this fact and increase appropriations. But appropriations were not increased. In 1933 the library's desk receipts amounted to $22,573, all of which it was forced to turn into the Treasury.

In 1927, when it was apparent that no more money would be forthcoming from the Carnegie funds and that the District would have to assume full responsibility for its libraries, Dr. Bowerman and the board of trustees proposed a five-year plan for the Public Library to parallel the five-year plan for the public schools. The plan called for the establishment of 12 main branches and 25 school branches. Although in 1929 a bill authorizing $2,000,000 for this expansion program passed the House and was reported favorably to the Senate by the Senate District Committee, it failed to pass.

So instead of 12 branch libraries, the only additional library since the last of Carnegie's gifts in 1925 has been the Northeastern branch, which finally was opened in 1932. That it justified its existence is evidenced by the fact that in the first four months the average circulation per borrower was 15, while the average of comparable libraries for the whole year was 23.05. No additional funds for more books have been forthcoming since the original stocking of the library, so unless further appropriations are made, Northeastern may experience the same early difficulties as the other branch libraries.

New Money Issue Demanded By Senators in Gold Measure

Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, and Walcott (Republican), of Connecticut, leading the fight on it, and Senators Fletcher (Democrat), of Florida; Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, and Connally (Democrat), of Texas, defending the measure.

Senators Borah, Wheeler and Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, entered the debate to challenge contentions the bill would raise prices and to question the speakers about the measure's inflationary prospects. Democratic Floor Leader Robinson and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, heckled Senator Glass.

Earlier in the day Senator Robinson, after a conference with President Roosevelt, said the Banking and Currency Committee amendment placing operation of the stabilization fund in the hands of a five-man board, instead of the Secretary of the Treasury, was "impracticable and obnoxious" and would be fought by the Administration.

Three-Man Board Reported.

It is understood President Roosevelt has decided as soon as the bill is passed to set up in the Treasury Department a board of three unidentified experts in foreign exchange who will direct the operations of the stabilization fund, much in the same manner as a three-man board now operates the British equalization fund. The Secretary of the Treasury would carry out the decisions of the proposed board.

Senator Robinson said that while the Administration did not indorse the amendments limiting to three years the life of the stabilization fund and the period in which the President may devalue the dollar, he probably would accept them—the only definite victory won so far by opponents of the bill.

When the printed draft of the amended Senate bill appeared yesterday, it also was found that the Banking and Currency Committee on Tuesday had limited the powers of the Secretary of the Treasury or the Stabilization Board, whichever may survive when the bill is adopted, to "the sole purpose of stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar in relation to the currencies of foreign governments." The Administration leaders will not oppose this change.

Throughout the day, Senator Borah, who objected to the hasty consideration of the bill, raised the question as to whether the gold bill was inflationary. Senators Barkley and Glass, on opposite sides of the debate, agreed in reply that it was "not necessarily so."

Rogers' Opinion Cited.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, pointed out to Senator Barkley that Prof. James H. Rogers, one of the President's advisers, had testified that the measure gave "almost complete assurance of early uncontrollable credit expansion."

The Kentuckian, after first questioning the accuracy of the transcript of the committee hearing—which, however, was in accord with the typed copies of the prepared statement Prof. Rogers gave to the press Monday—said he did not agree with the Yale teacher and felt sure he did not mean to say that the bill offered an opportunity for "uncontrollable credit expansion."

Senator Barkley, however, believed the provisions of the bill would gradually enhance prices. Senator Glass, on the other hand, contended that any price increase would be only temporary and that only speculators would be benefited. He cited the rise and fall of price levels early last summer after the Thomas inflation amendment was adopted.

Senator Borah said he could find that a single witness before the committee predicted with conviction that commodity prices would rise, which brought from Senator Glass the observation that if they did it would "create an almost indescribable destitution among the middle and salaried classes as happened in Europe."

Inflation Cry Raised.

"The decrease in the gold content of the dollar is not going to raise commodity prices unles you are going to issue currency against it," asserted Senator Wheeler, and Senator Borah, agreed, adding that "the country does not care who gets the Federal Reserve gold. It is interested in whether this bill is going to increase the circulating medium and the prices of commodities."

"What is to prevent the issuance of gold certificates against the profit which will come to the Treasury through revaluation?" asked Senator Connally. Senator Glass replied, but under the edicts of last spring any one who owns one will go to jail."

"I am no expert, financier or even a statesman," continued Senator Borah, "but do not forget that last spring we were asked to delegate certain powers in order to increase the circulating medium and raise prices, and we know what happened. Now we want to know whether the same thing is going to happen again."

Subsequently off the Senate floor in announcing his plan to offer an amendment providing mandatory use of the gold profit, Senator Borah said that in defending the bill Administration spokesmen were denying it provided currency inflation and it was for that reason he would oppose the bill unamended.

Gas Cut to 13 Cents In Price War Here

Independents Charge Big Chains Threaten Them.

More than 30 independent dealers in the District trimmed the price of third-grade gasoline to 13 cents per gallon yesterday in an effort to undersell chain corporations, which they claim, are trying to drive them out of business.

Through their spokesman, Joseph Amato, president of the new Association of Gasoline Retailers of Washington, they stated they were prepared to cut prices until they reached cost, although they hoped it would not be necessary.

Standard Oil Co. and other chain corporations, along with the Independent Service Stations Division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, maintained a price of 13.5 cents a gollon yesterday.

Bus Driver Appeals $101 Hyattsville Fine

Charged with reckless driving and operating a Capitol Transit Co. bus while under the influence of liquor, Charles G. Davis, Berwyn, Md., was fined $101 in Hyattsville police court yesterday. He appealed his case.

Corp. C. W. Cubbage, State policeman, said Davis crashed into a truck on the Baltimore boulevard near Berwyn last December 21. No passengers were on the bus and no one was injured.

Guy F. Wickham, 320 Channing street northeast, said to have driven the truck, was not held.

In the room occupied by Cleary MacCormick said he found a pigeon cote housing 100 birds. Another cote, containing 200 homing and carrier pigeons, was found in a storeroom annex.

Cleary and Rao were among the 92 prisoners occupying hospital wards. Examinations showed only 28 of them were actually ill. The others were placed in solitary confinement.

Narcotic Traffic Uncovered.

MacCormick declared Rao "bossed" the prison with the aid of a "board of strategy" composed of Cleary, Bosco Mazzio and Peter Kenny.

Evidence of an active narcotic traffic in the penitentiary was uncovered by Dr. Louis Berg, who also accompanied the inspection party. Dr. Berg examined 107 men under treatment for narcotic addiction in the workhouse dormitory and announced that several of them had had a "shot" within the last few hours.

Prison routine will be suspended while MacCormick and his aids continue their search throughout the entire island, situated in the East River beneath the Queensboro Bridge.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia described the disclosures as "typical" and a "perfectly good example of conditions I have inherited from the administration of the last eight years."

New District Levies Fought By Auto Club

Association Head Attacks Plans for Two-Thirds Boost in Revenue.

Opposition to new levies, tending to increase the $4,500,000 in special motor taxes paid by Washington car owners in 1933, will be voiced by the District of Columbia division of the American Automobile Association, Ernest N. Smith, executive vice president of the association, declared yesterday.

He said three projects are now before the Subcommittee on Fiscal Affairs of the House District Committee.

One of them, sponsored by Representative Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, would provide for an increase in the local gasoline tax from 2 to 4 cents a gallon, in addition to the 1-cent Federal levy. The two other bills, introduced by Representative Mapes, of Michigan, would, in addition to boosting the local gasoline tax, replace the $1 registration fee and personal property taxes now in existence by a weight tax on motor cars.

Due to the new Federal levies, the aggregate paid in 1933 was 78 per cent higher than two years ago. This would be increased by another $3,000,000, roughly, should the bills now pending be enacted.

Admitting that certain sections of the country have higher taxes than the District of Columbia, Smith, of the automobile association, added: "Certainly no one will contend that Washington motorists should pay more simply because others do elsewhere * * * and all studies indicate that motorists in the District are now paying their fair share of the cost of construction, maintaining and replacing streets."

Dollfuss Digs Spurs Into Nazi Clergymen

Vienna, Jan. 24 (AP).—Protestant clergymen and municipal officials today began to feel the spurs of Chancellor Dollfuss' anti-Nazi drive anew.

In Innsbruck, an evangelical pastor was arrested and fined 1,100 shillings (approximately $198) for an antigovernment sermon. At the same time, Walter Pembaur, vice burgomaster of Innsbruck, and Vice Burgomaster Woellerd, of Landeck, were jailed.

District Liquor Bill Is Signed By President

board from having an indirect interest in the liquor business is too broad, the Attorney General said. He pointed out the provision might exclude those who owned railroad stocks or stock in warehousing corporations.

Chain Store Provisions.

Chain stores are forbidden from selling beverages under another section, the Attorney General said. Committee members and Distrcit officials said it was their purpose to limit licenses to one store in each chain. Exclusion from licenses of stores and restaurants in residential areas was intentional, committee members said. This was aimed at nonconforming uses under the zoning law.

Mr. Choate found fault with the labelling provision, requiring statement of the ingredients and the formula used in rectifying spirits.

"The formulaes of rectified and blended spirits are changed almost from week to week depending upon materials available to the rectifier from which to make up the rectified products," Mr. Choate said.

"That is exactly what Congress was aiming at," Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, commented.

The proposed amendments will be considered at the meeting of the committee next Wednesday, Mrs. Norton said.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate Committee, said he would do nothing about the matter until the House had acted.

Regulations Expected.

The regulations soon to be promulgated by the Commissioners are expected to restrict the sale of liquor in the neighborhood of churches and schools and will empower the Liquor Control Board to demand production of the records of any club and the names and addresses of every one affiliated with it.

The only exceptions to the rule against sales within 400 feet of religious and educational institutions are in the case of bottle beer sales and the sales of liquor in clubs, hotels and drug stores.

The regulations are expected to prohibit:

1. The sale of alcoholic beverages in any building used as a dwelling or lodging house, unless the portion of the building in which it is sold is not accessible from other parts.

2. The display of liquors and heavy wines in restaurants, hotels and clubs unless expressly ordered for immediate consumption.

3. The display of liquor advertisements on the exterior of any licensed premises except manufacturers' buildings.

4. The purchase of liquor by any licensee in the District from any wholesaler in the District, unless the wholesaler has a District license.

Requirements Planned.

Requirements of the regulations are expected to be as follows:

1. Before a license, other than a solicitor's is issued, the applicant will have to file a certificate of occupancy issued under the authority of the zoning act.

2. That full opportunity be given to employes of liquor board to examine the licensed premises.

3. The posting in a conspicuous place of all licenses.

4. Off sale premises shall display signs inside their premises forbidding the consumption of liquor therein.

5. The maintenance of records, showing volume of purchases and sales by retailers and wholesalers, which will be open to inspection by the Liquor Board or its agents.

6. Monthly sales reports by manufacturers.

Hours of Sale.

Sale of all beverages is forbidden in restaurants, clubs and hotels between 2 a. m. and 9 a. m., while if off sale establishment, the sale of liquor is permitted only between 8 a. m. and 8 p. m., except on Saturdays when sales may be made until 9 p. m., it is understood. Light wines and beers may be sold in off sale establishments until midnight, it is understood.

Commissioner George E. Allen said last night that the board is considering the names of more than 800 applicants for the 25 positions on the board. Of this number, three are posts under the Corporation Counsel.

Commissioner Allen believes the board should have its headquarters in the District Building. There is no room available, but the Commission is considering the possibility of moving out some other District department to make room for it.

Japan-Soviet War Held Near

Nippon Plans to Launch Offensive Soon, Is Chinese Charge.

Geneva, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Qualified Chinese sources have claimed receipt of information that Japan intends to strike shortly in North China, below the Great Wall, in the first move of a conflict against Soviet Russia.

The Chinese authorities declared Japan probably will seek a pretext to move troops over the Great Wall into the Peiping-Tientsin area shortly after the coronation of Henry Pu-Yi, former "boy Emperor" of China, as ruler in Manchukuo on March 1.

The Japanese military clique, the Chinese assert, is ready to gamble on handling Soviet forces with their land and air units, while the Japanese navy remains prepared to protect the island empire against possible United States intervention.

Japanese financial difficulties were seen in Chinese circles here as the only reason for delays of this second Russo-Japanese War. The Chinese consider that if Japan wishes to remain dominant in the Far East, she must strike China and Soviet Russia, successively, before either succeeds with its national reconstruction program.

In some quarters rumors persisted that a secret agreement has been reached between China and Russia, to strengthen their position jointly against Japan.

Second Arrest Reveals Wide CWA Graft; More Expected

graft in the local CWA is widespread and that other arrests can be expected soon. They said that the further they investigated and the more persons they questioned, the more evidence of irregularities they have obtained.

In spite of the statement of Hopkins minimizing the number of irregularities actually existing, President Roosevelt revealed that he had been receiving 200 to 300 letters a day complaining of irregularities. It was said that most of the letters complained local political organizations were using the organization to build up their machines. At the same time, it was said Hopkins has been receiving as many as 2,000 similar letters every day.

Hopkins' statement came only 48 hours after he himself had complained bitterly of widespread graft in the CWA organization and announced he had asked the Department of Justice to act. Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Criminal Division of the department, is in charge of the CWA graft investigation. He conferred yesterday with Jacob Baker, assistant administrator of CWA, and Louis R. Glavis, chief of the Interior Department special investigating force.

Hopkins said there seems to be a "wide misunderstanding" over the extent of the corruption.

Small "in Proportion."

"As a matter of fact," he said, "it is of small proportions in terms of the number of persons employed on civil works and the amount of money expended.

"Any graft in an undertaking of this nature and at the expense of those who have suffered the brunt of the depression is so despicable that when exposed it is quite naturally magnified in the public mind beyond its actual proportions in terms of dollars or malefactions.

"It is unfair to the loyal and devoted workers in the Civil Works Administration to assume the Civil Works Administration is by any stretch of the imagination permeated with graft or corruption. No evidence has been brought to my attention that would warrant any such statement of belief.

"However, I am unwilling either complacently to condone or otherwise tolerate any graft or collusion in the Civil Works Administration. I will continue to follow up and carefully investigate every charge of unfaithful service. The least the public and unemployed can expect of their public servants is an unfailing regard for the public trust which has been imposed in them."

Thousands Spent on Probe.

Hopkins said at a press conference last Monday that his organization is spending tens of thousands of dollars running down graft reports. He also expressed the opinion that in the CWA the Administration "has a bear by the tail."

The Administration's plans for gradually letting go of the "bear" were revealed yesterday. President Roosevelt will ask Congress, probably today, for an appropriation of $850,000,000, of which $350,000,000 would be for public works and $500,000,000 for relief.

The present plan calls for conclusion of the Public Works program by May 1. This is meeting with spirited opposition in Congress and with a barrage of propaganda, requests and demands from every corner of the Nation.

A possible compromise solution of the problem, one designed to quiet, at least to some extent, the clamor for continuance of the program, was seen in the statement that the President could use some of the $500,000,000 relief money to carry on CWA work if it is found unemployed are not being rapidly absorbed.

The President hopes, however, that through the actual operation of the PWA, which has barely been started, through a pickup in industry and through seasonal employment on the farms of the South and West, most of the 4,000,000 workers now under CWA will be reemployed by May 1.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, after a visit to the White House, said he understood that the President expected at least 3,000,000 workers to be absorbed in regular employment by May 1.

750,000 Now on PWA.

At the present time, 750,000 men are employed on public works projects. It was said to be extremely doubtful whether the PWA could absorb 1,000,000 more men by May 1.

Secretary Ickes also is having trouble with graft reports in the PWA. He said that to prevent "rake-offs" on non-Federal projects, allotments would be paid only in small installments as construction actually is completed and passes inspection.

"Millions of dollars will not be advanced to officials of States and municipalities to do with as they please," Ickes said. "Local officials must show what the money has been spent for before they get it, and that expenditures were for the purposes for which allotments were made.

Ickes pointed out that any expenditures beyond the amounts PWA engineers feel necessary must come from local funds, and therefore any "rake-offs" must be paid for by local taxpayers.

The CWA flare-up in West Virginia is expected to result in a number of resignations. Following announcement no one connected actively with a political organization could have a CWA job, Maj. Albert E. Hahn, of Charleston, secretary of the Republican State executive committee, resigned as a field supervisor.

By order of W. W. Allen, State director of CWA personnel, all work was suspended on projects in Kanawha County because of the threat of the State Unemployed League to call a strike. League leaders said CWA and PWA projects would be picketed.

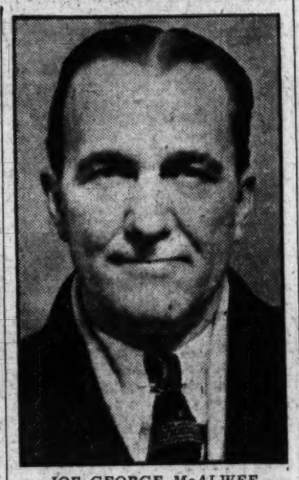
Another political graft scandal, not connected with any Government activity, resulted yesterday in a two-year prison sentence and a fine of $2,000 for Gabriel L. Rettatiata, in Baltimore. Rettatiata, president of the "Democratic Club of Maryland," pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with collecting $4,520 from 39 unemployed persons. He is said to have promised to obtain Government appointments for them.

Used Prominent Speakers.

The "club" president is said to have convinced his vicitms of his political influence by obtaining prominent Democrats to speak before his organization. It was said the speakers were ignorant of the use to which Rattatiata put their appearances at the meetings.

Secretary Perkins said yesterday that many complaints about political influence in placing CWA and PWA workers had been received from persons applying to the reemployment service. She said most of these complaints were from members of political parties, stating party workers were not being given jobs.

This, she said, was sufficient evidence that the reemployment service was not exercising partiality in filling CWA jobs.



JOE GEORGE McALWEE, of 1735 Park road, was arrested yesterday in connection with CWA graft investigations here. McAlwee was taken into custody with Thomas E. Archer, of 1631 Euclid street, after CWA workers complained to local authorities that rent survey supervisors have accepted money from them as insurance against loss of their jobs.

Indictment Refused In Accident Death

The District Grand Jury yesterday declined to indict Jacob Spund, Connecticut avenue grocer, arrested in connection with the death of Mrs. Virginia Pflieger, fatally injured by an automobile at Connecticut avenue and Rodman street last month.

Bilbo Evades Taking Stand On Candidacy

Continues in AAA Post; Showdown Awaits Davis Return.

Former Gov. Theodore Bilbo of Mississippi retained title to his AAA shears and pastepots yesterday, while the voters of the Magnolia State awaited word of his intentions regarding the forthcoming Senatorial primaries.

In the absence from Washington of Chester C. Davis, agriculture adjustment administrator, nothing could be done yesterday about a showdown with the clipping bureau chieftain over his reported ambition to run for the Senate against Senator Hubert Stephens.

Bilbo kept busy in his office yesterday, supervising the clipping of newspaper and magazine articles pertaining to the AAA. He reiterated he had not declared formally for the Senate, but is merely considering the matter in view of the urging of prospective supporters.

In political circles, it was considered a toss-up. Some believed Bilbo would sacrifice his $6,000 job and campaign against Senator Stephens. Others thought Bilbo would listen to the counsel of his sponsor, Senator Pat Harrison, and remain with the AAA.

Senators Stephens and Harrison declined yesterday to comment upon the status of their fellow Mississippian, although it has been common knowledge for some time they both hope the former has no opposition. Senator Harrison, who obtained the AAA clipping bureau post for Bilbo, will support Senator Stephens in the event of a contest in the primaries, he has said.

It was evident that despite a strong feeling that Bilbo should not retain his farm administration job at $6,000 a year and run for the Senate at the same time, there was a disposition in higher AAA and Department of Agriculture circles to consider Senator Harrison's wishes in the matter. As long as the senior Senator from Mississippi was desirous of Bilbo remaining with the AAA, officials were hesitant to force the issue.

Carroll County Court Project Wins Approval

Repairs Will Cost $11,000; Kanawha CWA Work Is Stopped.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.). Repairs and improvements to the courthouse costing $11,000, Carroll County's most important CWA project, have been approved by Harry Greenstein.

Preliminary work has been started in replacing joists with reinforced concrete beams, building fireproof stairways and relaying floors. Forty-nine men will get work on the project.

Dr. Emma L. Ward, State director of women's work under the CWA, has recommended that local committees find work available for women.

Charles O. Clemson, committee chairman, also announced that all CWA workers in Carroll County except those employed on Westminster projects, had been reduced to a 15-hour week basis. This cut the county pay roll from $9,500 per week to $5,300. CWA workers in Westminster come under the 24-hour week basis.

Other matters discussed included instructions from the office of the commissioner of motor vehicles that truckers on CWA projects must obtain commercial hauling licenses.

A letter in reply was directed to the commissioner stating that as the present work is only temporary, truckers can not afford to pay the $50 license fee for 2-ton trucks and $150 for 5-ton trucks.

New and supplementary projects, amounting to $21,173.43, were approved by the committee last night. B. L. Thompson, State supervisor, will inspect work in Carroll County next week.

Strike Threats Halt Work.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 24 (AP). Work on all CWA projects in Kanawha County was halted today as officials considered threats of a Statewide CWA strike.

The stop order was issued last night by W. W. Allen, director of CWA personnel, as strike leaders announced they would picket all projects and seek to recruit more strikers. About 500 walked out yesterday.

Allen explained that calling off of work was due to the new order reducing weekly hours from 30 to 24. Wednesdays and Thursdays are to be cut from the work week, he said.

CWA Quota Again Cut.

Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.). Robert F. Roth, county CWA administrator, was advised from Charleston of a further 10 per cent reduction of the number of men employed on CWA work in addition to the 15 per cent cut ordered recently. This brings Marion County's quota of 3,200 down to 2,400.

Civilian Conservation Corps workers in West Virginia forests have planted 1,031,700 trees during the last eight months, according to Thomas W. Skuce, extension forester of West Virginia University.

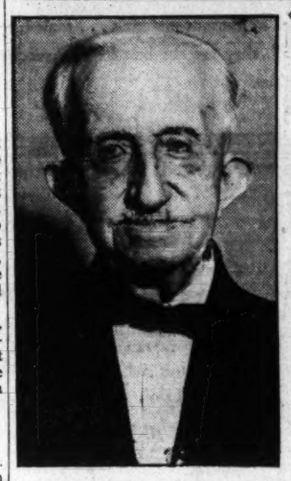
150-Year-Old Log Cabin Landmark Being Razed

Post Staff Photos.

An ancient log cabin, one of the landmarks of Harrisonburg, Va., is giving way to the march of progress as workmen start razing the building. It was in this structure that James E. Reherd (left), 88-year-old Harrisonburg bank president, was born.



Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.). A Harrisonburg landmark is giving way to the march of progress in the razing of one of the finest examples of the ancient log-house builder's art revealed here in many a day.

Strangely enough, few people remembered the log structure until the brick veneering was removed several days ago. The bricks replaced the original outside plaster 30 years ago.

This two-story structure on Liberty street faces the jail and is only a block from the court square. Local historians say it is at least 150 years old, although there are no records available as to its age or builder. The massive pine logs, some 18 inches thick, were hewed out by hand and are perfectly dovetailed at the corners.

This house was the birthplace of James E. Reherd, 88-year-old president of the National Bank of Harrisonburg, who recently received many tributes as one of the State's oldest active bankers. He is now serving his twenty-ninth term as head of the bank, which he helped to organize 29 years ago.

Site Bought in 1830.

A deed on record in the Rockingham County clerk's office shows that Mr. Reherd's father, William Reherd, purchased the land in 1830. Indications are the house was on the property at the time. What is now Liberty street was then the main thoroughfare through the village. The deed reveals that the land was a part of the Harrison tract on which Harrisonburg is located.

William Reherd, a Pennsylvania Duth youth, came to Rockingham from Berks County, Pa., when 18. After serving his apprenticeship as a blacksmith he went into business for himself, his shop being located in the rear of the building now being razed. He was a skilled mechanic and constructed some of the first steam engines used in these parts. In contrast, the old shop site is being cleared to make way for a filling station.

Nine Children Born There.

The nine children of William Reherd were born in the old house. James E. Reherd estimates that the family moved from the building to the Reherd homeplace just east of Harrisonburg 80 years ago. James E. was next to the youngest member of the family. DeWitt Clinton Reherd, prominent farmer and contractor, was the youngest. He died two years ago. The eldest son, Lewis, was wounded in the Battle of Gettysburg. Peter Reherd, another brother, served as Rockingham County treasurer and was prominent in Republican political circles. Dr. Herbert Reherd, a grandson of William Reherd, has been president of Westminster College, Salt Lake City, Utah, for many years. There are only a few survivors of the Reherd family in the United States, and it is believed that only one person of that name came here in the big migration from Holland and Germany. This was the father of William Reherd.

DIED.

PRUITT—On Tuesday, January 23, 1934, at his residence, 631 L street southwest, GEORGE HENRY, beloved husband of Minnie D. Pruitt. Funeral from the above residence on Friday, January 26, at 2:30 p. m. Relatives and friends invited. Interment Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Services by W. W. Chambers Co.

SAYER—On Wednesday, January 24, 1934, at Children's Hospital, at 8:20 a. m., SUSANNE, beloved baby daughter of J. A. Logan and Virginia Sayer (nee La Fontaine), aged sixteen months. Funeral from her late residence, 5456 Nebraska avenue northwest, on Friday, January 26, at 2 p. m. Relatives and friends are invited. Interment Congressional Cemetery.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.). Prompt action by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, in appointing George S. Rasin, retired farmer, of Kennedyville, to fill the unexpired term of the late James R. Groves, Kent County Orphans Court, enabled that body to sit this week.

Judge Groves died suddenly last Saturday. Judge J. Henry Thompson is ill at his home at Rock Hall, and the law required two judges to sit.

Charles Town CWA Cuts Off 161 Workers

Retention of Employes in Reduction Order Based on Needs.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—One hundred and sixty-one men were laid off from Civil Works Administration jobs here today as a result of the 25 per cent personnel reduction ordered from CWA headquarters in Washington.

Retention of employes was based on their estimated need according to the number of persons dependent upon them. The weekly pay roll in Jefferson County is expected to be reduced by approximately $4,000 by the personnel cut and installation of the 15-hour week for workers.

Three new projects have been approved for county CWA work. They are: Improvements to Shepherdstown State Teachers College, a county-wide sanitation program and a plan of sewing work for women.

Activity in obtaining land for the proposed airport here, to be constructed in cooperation with the CWA, will be continued.

Members of the Kiwanis and Lions Clubs, organizations which have agreed to finance purchase of the site, plan to have all arrangements tentatively made for leasing or purchasing the property when further CWA funds are made available for labor on the project.

Airport Fund Approved.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—A Federal appropriation of $35,000 to construct a Parkersburg municipal airport on lands leased near Maplewood has been approved by the State CWA and forwarded to Washington, according to Ralph Beckner, president of the Parkersburg Board of Commerce.

Beckner says an aviation representative from Trenton, N. J., has planned establishment of a contact point in Parkersburg for a Pittsburgh to Charleston air line. Establishment of an air mail route is expected.

Planting Project Starts.

Parsons, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—As part of the plan to counteract soil erosion in the Tennessee Valley, seeds extracted from pine cones will be planted. The work is being done at the Government nursery here by CWA labor.

Seventy-four men have been dropped since the CWA ruling limiting work to 15 hours a week. Additional funds have been received to continue the building of bus stops for school children.

Roanoke Labor Body Amends Its By-Laws

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—By-law amendments, one of which would refuse admittance to members "under the influence of liquor or drugs," were adopted by the Roanoke Central Labor Union.

The organization, which changed its name to the Roanoke Federation of Labor, went on record as opposed to all women and children under 18 years of age working between 12 and 6 a. m. and favored discontinuance of the use of State police and militia in labor disputes.

Raids on Rabbit Pens Puzzle Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Raids on two rabbit pens here, with 14 rabbits found dead in the first case and 4 missing and 3 dead in the second, have police puzzled. C. L. Duke and Statton Holliday, neighbors, reported the losses.

In both cases the coops had been torn open and the rabbits' necks were broken. Police believe boys with a mania for killing dumb animals may be responsible.

Transient Aid Established.

Virginia's eleventh Federal Transient Service Bureau was established here yesterday by Miss Elizabeth Ayres, State supervisor, in charge of Adrian C. Anderson, of Jacksonville, Fla., assisted by Miss Betsy Howard.

While bureau officials are tracing records and trying to find jobs for transients here, whites will be quartered with the Salvation Army and colored men with the McGuire Hotel.

Loan applications from five schools in this section have been approved by the State Board of Education, as follows: New Hope School, Stafford County, $1,600; Falmouth High School, Stafford, $3,200; Tappahannock School, Essex County, $26,000. Listed as literary funds are the Lee-Maury School, Caroline County, $1,500, and the Mica School, also of Caroline, $1,500.

Workers on Reduced Hours.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.). CWA workers in Rockingham and Harrisonburg are in their first week of reduced hours, those in the county woking 15 hours and in the city 24 hours. The cut affects the 1,474 workers, and it is estimated the $17,500 pay roll will be cut at least half.

The workers are engaged on 80 projects, mostly involving repairs to county school buildings. The individual projects range from $50 to $1,000.

One project is flood-control work on Dry River. Men have cleaned out the bed of the stream and constructed levees to prevent the flooding of lowlands. So far as is known this is the only flood-control project in the Shenandoah Valley.

Project Nears Finish.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—One street grading project will be completed by CWA forces here this week, and widening of Franklin road from Roanoke River to the south limits of the city will start Monday, City Engineer C. L. Watkins said.

The city faces condemnation proceedings along the right of way, since four property owners have not reached an agreement on property extending some 1,400 feet.

$250,000 School Plan.

Danville, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—The city council has approved plans submitted by the school board for a building program of $250,000 to provide for expansion incidental to the enlargement of school territory. The program would be financed through the Public Works Administration on a loan and grant basis.

The council had rejected an earlier proposal for an expenditure of $300,000. The school board reduced the figure to $250,000 by eliminating a new colored school building. An application will be sent to the public works advisory board in Richmond.

PWA to Help Reconstruction In Storm Area

$250,000 Fund Approved for Loans on Shore Property.

Residents of Chesapeake Bay sections and the Eastern Shore who suffered property damage during the great storm last fall will be aided in repairing and rebuilding their homes through a fund established by the Public Works Administration.

The Administration yesterday approved a loan of $250,000 to be used for the work. This sum will be advanced to the Chesapeake Shore Reconstruction Association of Norfolk, Va., which, in turn, will make loans to property owners who furnish proper security.

The loan, Public Works officials said, is part of allotments totaling $17,541,970 advanced by the PWA for relief in hurricanes, fires, drouth and earthquakes during the last year.

Although headquarters for the Chesapeake Bay Association have been located in Norfolk, the office will handle applications for loans from residents of Maryland as well as Virginia. The association is a nonprofit organization set up for administrative convenience. It will take as security for loans first mortgages on properties to be repaired.

Where properties already are covered by first mortgages, officials said, the mortgage holders will be required to subordinate their lien.

Assembly Visited By Coast Officials

Richmond Voting Machines Watched in Action.

Richmond, Jan. 24 (AP).—A group of distinguished Californians, who said the California Legislature spent 52½ hours (more than a full week of eight-hour days) in roll calls at the last session, today visited the General Assembly to witness the action of the electrical voting machines.

State Senator J. M. Inman, of Sacramento, a member of the California Legislature for 20 years, told the Virginia senators they did "not look any dumber than those of our Senate." This brought a laugh.

R. L. Patterson, of Bakersfield, a member of the California House, expressed pleasure at the opportunity of "seeing where legislation began in this country." Edward Hyatt, of Sacramento, State Engineer of California, brought greetings from Gov. Rolph.

Mystery Bullet Fatal to Youth

Martinsburg Boy Dies of Infection After Month's Fight in Hospital.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.). Luther Lamb, 14, who apparently was recovering from a bullet wound in his head after a month in the hospital here, lost his fight this morning as a result of infection.

He died in the hospital, to which he was returned a few days ago after having been sent home.

The boy was shot as he was returning to his home from school the afternoon of December 14. The bullet entered the head from the right side below the ear, penetrated the rear lobe of the brain and lodged on the inner side of the skull on the left side.

Surgeons declined to operate. The bullet was removed this morning and turned over to State police, who are trying to determine where it came from. They will compare it with the type of shell used by a boy reported to have been shooting that day in the same section.

The youth was born in Stanardsville, Va.

Real Pearls still come from the Sea

Everything worth while has its imitations.

But real pearls still come from the ocean depths.

And real Hard Coal still comes from Pennsylvania's famous Anthracite mines.

Remember that when you read advertising offering you "bargain Anthracite" or Hard Coal at a "bargain" price.

Always make sure that you get exactly what you think you're getting when you buy fuel.

A safe guide is to accept the fact that there is no satisfactory substitute for Pennsylvania Anthracite . . . the real Hard Coal that you know and want.

Think it over.

Farmers Told Of Corn-Hog Reduction Plan

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—George C. Herring, V. P. I. agricultural expert, yesterday completed a series of addresses on the corn-hog reduction campaign throughout Fauquier County when he addressed a gathering of farmers at Western High School.

As in the wheat reduction program, benefit payments will be made those who cooperate with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in the matter of production curtailment, Mr. Herring explained. Payments will be derived from a processing tax on corn and hogs.

County Show Dates Set.

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—The fourth annual Shenandoah County Corn Show and the sixth annual Shenandoah County Egg Show and Poultry Institute will be held here February 15 and 16.

Massanutten National Bank is sponsoring the corn show, while a group of Strasburg business firms are underwriting the egg and poultry exhibit. The poultry show will be under direction of the Shenandoah County Future Farmers of America Association, the county high school agricultural instructors and the county agent.

There will be three classes: One for adult farmers, another for F. F. A. members and a third for 4-H Club members.

Hutcheson to Speak.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 24 (AP).—John R. Hutcheson, director of the extension division of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, who for 20 years has been identified with agricultural work in the State, will speak before the thirteenth annual State corn and grain show here tomorrow and Friday.

Virginia's contribution toward success of the National tobacco program will be his theme. Several other agricultural experts have been invited to address the show, being held under auspices of the Virginia Crop Improvement Association.

Some six hundred farmers and others interested in the State's agricultural welfare are expected to attend.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Thomas S. Anderson, secretary-treasurer of the new Productive Credit Association embracing Frederick, Carroll, Washington and Montgomery Counties, explained to a number of farmers at Rockville, yesterday, how loans may be obtained through the Farm Credit Administration for general agricultural purposes.

Peery Considers York River Span

Yorktown-Gloucester Point Bridge Is Proposed.

Richmond, Jan. 24 (AP).—Gov. Peery has under advisement a plan for construction of a $2,000,000 suspension bridge over the York River from Yorktown to Gloucester Point.

The plan calls for construction of the span with PWA funds, 70 per cent of which would be repaid to the Federal Government over a period of years under an arrangement whereby the bridge would be made self-liquidating through tolls.

A delegation of Tidewater Assemblymen, accompanied by State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley, asked the Governor to include necessary legislation in the administration program.

Hanging Death Called Murder

Sons of Fredericksburg Rope Victim Deny He Was Suicide.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Isaac Posey, found dead in his home here with a rope around his neck Sunday morning, were held today. The Rev. Robert A. Caverlee, of Fredericksburg Baptist Church, officiated. Members of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics were pallbearers.

Fredericksburg's coroner, Dr. John E. Cole, delayed announcement of a verdict after questioning Joseph, Samuel and James, sons of Mr. Posey; his brother-in-law, Edward Gray, of Washington, and William Austin of Dumfries, his son-in-law. Dr. Cole tonight will question Mrs. Annie Lewis, a colored woman who heard a car depart from Dr. Posey's house Saturday night at between 2 and 3 a. m. about the time authorities figured the death occured.

Sons of Mr Posey insist he was murdered, not a suicide, saying he was planning to marry Monday morning. They point out a bruise on the man's head, and say the money found on him Sunday morning was $62 less than he had the night before. Also they contend the man had mortal fear of death which would not have allowed suicide.

Dr. Cole expects to pronounce a verdict at another session of the inquest tonight.

Centenarian

Ellicott City, Md., Jan. 24 (AP).—Charles McCummisky, who saw nearly 102 years pass by but observed his birthday only 24 times, died in his sleep yesterday.

"Uncle Charley" was born in a log house near Federal Hill February 29, 1832—a day which comes every four years. There was no February 29 in 1900.

He was the oldest volunteer fireman in Maryland—having joined the first Baltimore Hose Company, No. 10, in 1849.

Union troops, on the lookout for Confederates in Howard County in the Civil War mistook him for one and shot him through the shoulder. That was his only brush with warfare.

"I took a drink of whisky only once in my life," he once said, "and that was enough. It burned all the way down."

Bridge Case Goes To Supreme Court

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Application has been made before the U. S. Supreme Court by attorneys representing the Harpers Ferry Bridge Corporation who have designed an appeal in the case of the West Virginia Public Service Commission versus the Bridge Corporation.

The State Supreme Court of Appeals recently gave the commission the right to examine the tolls schedule on the bridge over the Potomac at Harpers Ferry.

The primary issue is to place the bridge tolls under some regulatory body for examination and perhaps eventual supervision. The company has resisted efforts thus far.

Auto Driver Acquitted In Motorcycle Death

Covington, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—David Brisendine was found not guilty of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of H. H. Merritt by a jury here.

West Virginia Recess Sought By Legislature

May Reconvene on Feb. 5; Await Ruling on Tax Collection Law.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Plans were made in the Legislature today for a recess until February 5, by which time it is expected the Supreme Court will have passed upon the recently-enacted tax collection law.

The House of Delegates approved a resolution to that effect, but Speaker Hiner said it could not recess until the debt amortization measure could be passed, probably tomorrow. Action had been requested the Senate, he said, so the recess could be considered there promptly.

Delegate J. A. Neal (Democrat), Nicholas, introduced a bill today to abolish the State Board of Control.

Advance Power Plant Bill.

The Senate finance committee today recommended passage of a bill permitting municipalities to borrow funds to acquire or build their own power plants. It had already been passed by the House, but the Senate attached amendments which advocates said would make it unworkable.

The amendments subject property and bonds of such plants to taxation, place them under supervision of the State public service commission, and require a permit from it before an election can be held on the question of municipal ownership.

A resolution asking support of pending measures or the introduction of a new one requiring the State government to pay entire costs of maintaining State institutions has been adopted by the Harrison County Court and forwarded to the county's delegation in the Legislature.

Under present laws, various counties contribute toward the support of State institutions on the basis of the number of patients or inmates committed. During the last fiscal year, Harrison County spent $14,256.95 for support of residents in State institutions, of which $7,902 went to the Hopemont Tuberculosis Sanitarium near Terra Alta.

Road Cost to State.

Mrs. Perle T. Harmon (Republican), McDowell County, has introduced a bill in the House calling for payment by the State to the counties and districts for roads taken over as a secondary State highway system.

The measure directs that cash payments shall be made to counties where no bonded obligations exist for the roads, and that otherwise the payments shall be made in retirement of bonds.

Skyline Drive Delay Opposed

Shenandoah Valley, Inc., at Annual Meetings Asks Opening in Spring.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Shenandoah Valley, Inc., will intensify efforts to have the Skyline Drive in Shenandoah National Park opened to the public early this spring.

A resolution adopted at the annual meeting yesterday said in part:

"That Shenandoah Valley, Inc., is opposed to further delay in opening Skyline Drive in Shenandoah National Park, and is of the opinion that failure to open the drive last fall has been costly to the valley and Virginia generally through revenue lost from tourist travel that showed a considerable increase in other parks and a longer travel season."

The resolution urged the State Commission of Conservation and Development to open the drive early this spring.

Copies of the resolution will be forwarded to the commission and to Gov. George C. Peery.

John T. Harris, of Harrisonburg, speaking at the annual meeting, praised the work of the organization in behalf of the park and drive project, and praised A. T. Moore and F. P. Loth, both of Staunton, president and secretary of the group, for their efforts.

Moore and Loth were reelected unanimously. Holcomb Parkes, of Roanoke, was renamed vice president, and William B. Miller, of Staunton, treasurer.

Time of Report Unknown; Four Murders Also Await Action.

Princess Anne, Md., Jan. 24 (AP).—Having called in all the 42 witnesses who were summoned, the Somerset County grand jury today was studying their testimony in its investigation of the lynching here October 18 of George Armwood, a Negro accused of attacking an aged white woman.

The grand jury session broke up late yesterday. Sheriff Luther Daugherty said none of the witnesses had been directed to return today for further questioning. There was no indication when the body would make its report.

Four murder cases will come before the grand jury, including the slaying of Mrs. Margaret Drumbley at Marion Station on New Year's Eve and the fatal shooting of Mrs. Norris Taylor last month. The other two murderers are Negro cases.

Sam Jones, Negro, held in the Baltimore Jail awaiting the jury's action in the Drumbley case, while Earl Collins, a Virginia waterman, is in jail, here accused of slaying Mrs. Taylor.

Maryland to Check Truck, Bus Lines

State Insurance Law to Be Enforced.

Baltimore, Jan. 24 (AP).—E. Austin Baughman, State motor vehicle commissioner, today clamped down the financial responsibility law governing commercial motor vehicles with instructions to State police to check all nonresident vehicles engaged in interstate operation.

The law, recently passed, provides owners of commercial motor vehicles engaged in transportation of passengers or property in interstate or intrastate commerce must file in the commissioner's office a certificate of insurance, showing the owner's financial responsibility, or bond.

Many out-of-State owners, whose trucks use Maryland highways, have failed to comply with the law, Commissioner Baughman said.

Furst, Of Baltimore.

Frank A. Furst, the Warwick of the Democratic party in Maryland, was a native of Germany who impressed his character most vividly on his adopted home.

As a boy, he ran away from home to join a Yankee regiment passing through Baltimore, and was injured under a wagon of the Army train at Bull Run. He helped build railroads in the West and was wounded when the Arapahoe Indians, unable to understand quite why they should give up good lands to the white man, attacked the engineering party. He lost money in a mining venture and went head over heels in debt.

In middle life, he got interested in a small dredging company in Baltimore, and at his death this week, at the ripe age of 88, he was a millionaire. His company dug the Cape Cod ship canal, drained the Florida Everglades and reclaimed 4,000,000 acres of land, built the Aberdeen Proving Ground and much of the water front improvement at Coney Island. Its engineering record, not just politics, brought the contracts.

Mr. Furst was mentor and dean of the Democratic party in Maryland, not merely an old line political boss. The Baltimore Sun refers to him as "maker of governors, United States Senators, and mayors" and says that "no one else has been so potent . . . in remembering and stating the cause of the humble." The relatively high type of government which Maryland and Baltimore have had are certainly partly due to the warm personality and shrewd judgment of Mr. Furst. He was a practical party leader, no doubt of that. But with a character which did much to mitigate—and to obscure—the evils of boss rule.

The District Line.

Not all residents of Washington realize that the District of Columbia extends to the south side of the Potomac River. It is well understood that the District once included a slice of Virginia running as far south as Alexandria, but that area was retroceded in 1846. Since then the exact southern boundary of the District has never been established, but in at least one case the Supreme Court awarded territory south of the Potomac to Washington.

Representative Smith's bill authorizing appointment of a boundary commission will revive this important question when it is considered today by a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee. Settlement of the controversy is particularly urgent because it involves claims to part of the Washington Airport, where a permanent air terminal for the Capital City may be established.

For many years it was taken for granted that all the land on the south side of the Potomac in this vicinity belonged to Virginia. But in 1921 the Supreme Court held that a small area near Alexandria, which had been built up by the deposit of material from the Potomac channel, was a part of the District. The court took note of the statute which refers to the District as "including the river Potomac in its course through the District." This language, the court held, imports "an assertion by Congress that the title of the United States embraces the whole river bed."

Since the 46 acres involved in this case are not adjacent to Washington, and because of fear that it might become a sort of "no man's land," jurisdiction over it was ceded to Virginia in 1927. The larger question as to where the District ends and Virginia begins remains in confusion. All that any one can say at present is that the District extends "at least to low water mark on the Virginia side." But original low water marks have been obliterated by numerous improvements.

Various attempts have been made to bring Arlington County back into the District. As a metropolis Washington is rapidly expanding into Virginia as well as Maryland. Conflicts as to the location of obnoxious plants just across the river from the National Capital have already arisen. As far back as 1910 President Taft made an urgent appeal for restoration of this area, excluding Alexandria, to Federal jurisdiction. He said:

> The land which lies along the Potomac River above the railroad bridge and across the Potomac, including Arlington Cemetery, Fort Myer, the Government Experiment Farm, the village of Rosslyn and the Palisades of the Potomac, reaching to where the old District line intersects the river, is very sparsely settled and could be admirably utilized for increasing the system of the parks of Washington. * * * I urgently recommend that steps be taken to carry out this plan.

It might be advisable to give the proposed commission authority to study the question of bringing once more within the boundaries of the District that small area south of the Potomac which will inevitably become an integral part of metropolitan Washington.

Facing Two Ways.

The American people will be doing themselves, the Japanese and the cause of world peace a great injustice if they do not try to form an impartial judgment, free from the bias of jingoism and big-navy propaganda, on what is transpiring in Japan.

Unfortunately, the Japanese have made that difficult. They revealed themselves, in explaining their incursions into Manchuria, as masters of dissimulation. They withdrew from the League under world-wide condemnation because it seemed to them, or so they said, that neither Geneva nor Washington could understand Japan's divine mission to bring peace to the East by the sword. So Japan herself has made it necessary to examine Japanese official statements in the light of Japanese tradition and philosophy rather than in the light of Occidental concepts and ethics.

Nevertheless, it would be little short of dense to ignore recent facts which could scarcely have been stage-set. Gen. Araki, regarded as the chief fire-brand and the leading figure in the army's domination of national affairs for the past two and a half years, is actually out of the cabinet. And at least two Japanese newspapers charge that he got out to avoid the vigorous interpellations that were to attend the opening of the Diet.

The Home Minister promised, under rebuke from the opposition, to curb the saffron journals of the type which have been carrying inflammatory anti-American articles. The influential newspaper Nichi Nichi says that now the "Japanese themselves breathe easier" and the Associated Press correspondent in Tokyo reports "unanimous indication of the army's declining power." Liberals, whose genuine anti-militarism can not be doubted, are bolder than they have been since September, 1931.

Foreign Minister Hirota's recent speech in the Diet throws further light. He turned a distinctly friendly face to the United States, though frowning toward Asia. His conciliatory gesture in this direction is to be followed, he said yesterday, by a note which will have as its purpose an effort to "facilitate a friendly solution of difficult problems likely to arise one or two years hence." The reference, of course, is to problems created by the expiration of the London naval agreement. Whether the Japanese gesture is inspired by alarm at our tremendous building program or by an honest desire to conciliate us, it must be recognized that Japan is giving both nations an opportunity, in advance of the conference, to lay their cards on the table. That ought to be helpful.

Such a discussion will give us an opportunity, moreover, to renew expressions of apprehension over Japan's attitude toward Russia and China, as expressed in Mr. Hirota's speech, if we consider that it menaces Asiatic peace and, therefore, the Kellogg Pact and other treaties. Apparently there is to be no relaxation of Japan's expansive policy on the Asiatic continent. Mr. Hirota said there was "no concrete evidence" that China would soon be ready to fulfill her promise to discuss future relations with Japan, although a truce was called upon the basis of that promise.

As for Russia, Mr. Hirota found her attitude "most surprising and regrettable" and criticized Russian "propaganda" against Japan. The references carried no evidence of a genuine change in Asiatic policy, giving the world assurance of Japan's intention to confine her military ventures to what she has already won with the sword. But with the United States, at least, desire to come to an understanding is apparent.

Hat In Hand.

Harry Hopkins' dilemma with the CWA—he described it as having a bear by the tail—is merely a minor problem in comparison with what the League of Nations has in the Austrian situation.

Under the spell of Mr. Masaryk's argument that the Austro-Hungarian empire was really the sore spot in Europe and must be drawn and quartered, the Allied Nations rewrote the map of central Europe and left Vienna the capital of a nation of 6,000,000 persons, where 52,000,000 had once paid her tribute.

The little remnant of the empire has never been self-supporting. Through almost all of its history, financial commissioners from the League have been trying to straighten out Austria's affairs. Seven times in 14 years it has been necessary for the great powers which desire to maintain the status quo to advance loans through the League or its agencies. Foreign loans now amount to $500,000,000 and nobody expects repayment without composition from a country which is not self-sufficient, which is surrounded by suspicious and hostile neighbors, and with tariff walls keeping its goods out of all of them.

The situation is one in which the great powers, for political reasons, are perpetuating an impossible economic situation. The strain has driven the Austrian people into a determination to effect a change of some kind. It is generally recognized in Europe that except for the foreign loans, and except for the threat of invasion from the Little Entente, Italy and Yugoslavia, the country would be in the hands of the Nazis, favorable to union with Germany. Through the World Court decision of October, 1931, Austria was forbidden to effect a customs union with Germany on the ground that it was a violation of the Geneva protocol of 1922 in which Austria agreed to make no engagements that would affect her independence.

Ironically, Austria finds now that the failure to make some economic arrangement, so obviously necessary to her self-support, is seriously threatening her independence. Italy, France, England, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia insist that she shall not unite, even through tariff consolidation, with Germany, yet they offer her no help except financial aid to perpetuate in power the government they desire. The economic condition of the people is showing no improvement, and even the loyal anti-Nazi Tyrolese are demanding some sort of settlement.

Again, Austria has her hat in hand, asking the League which is so zealous for her independence, to come over into Macedonia and guarantee it.

Protest Piles Up.

That master of the short story, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, once wrote a dramatic tale of an Irish soldier who hoped to raise the spirit of republican rebellion in an English regiment. To that end he treasured in his tunic a green flag with the uncrowned harp, and to that end he worked on his comrades so that, confronting the enemy in a battle with Arab tribesmen in North Africa, they at first refused to fight.

To the Arabs, however, the difference between an Irish patriot and an English Tommy was immaterial. With equal zest, as the battle raged, the savage tribesmen speared recruits from Tipperary and from Suffolk. Confronted with indiscriminate butchery by those whom he had regarded as friends of Ireland—because enemies of the English—the Irish private raised his green flag, rallied his company, and saved the day for the British army.

For reasons which need not be emphasized this lively tale recurs to mind on reading in the New York Herald-Tribune the wail with which Walter Lippmann greets the Administration's position on amendment of the gold reserve bill. Mr. Lippmann, as every sincere and intelligent friend of the party in power, has obviously been deeply impressed by Owen Young's testimony before the Senate Committee on Currency and Banking. Like Mr. Young, he sees the enormous difference between regarding this measure as emergency and as permanent policy. Almost is Mr. Lippmann prepared to pull a flag of revolt from his bosom and to cry to the inert ranks of Democracy—"join even the Republicans against the dictatorial aspects of this legislation, for it threatens everything that true liberalism holds dear."

And Mr. Lippmann's protest is the more effective because he admits himself in favor of the bill, perhaps in somewhat the same way as Doyle's Irish soldier favored the Arab tribesmen until they got near enough to ascertain their purpose. It is the crude way in which this vital legislation is being jammed through Congress and the curious reluctance to put a term to its effects which exasperates the author of "A Preface To Morals." And certainly no one who has studied the theme of morality, political or otherwise, would be likely to indorse the desirability of vesting such huge powers in the Executive without allowing time to examine dispassionately what is involved.

Yesterday's senatorial debate in the historic struggle shows that with each passing hour perception of the meaning of this bill is growing. As the perception grows, so does the opposition. In these conditions the pressure for an immediate and irrevocable vote is bound to stimulate belief that what is wanted is passage of the bill before the public understands its purpose, and the fundamental shifts in the character of our Government which are involved.

The Guest Of Greece.

Strange ways of cultivating international friendship are practiced in Greece. The government at Athens has finally refused to extend its hospitality to Samuel Insull beyond January 31. An appeal by Insull's attorney was carried to the state council. But the council decided that "the minister, by refusing permission to the applicant, who is an American citizen, did so in the interest of the State, with a desire to maintain friendly relations with the United States." Hence, Insull's plea was denied.

Last November a very different attitude prevailed in Athens. The courts denied a request from the United States for extradition of the fallen utilities magnate, and the semiofficial press undertook to explain that "Greek justice is entirely independent, and the United States Government could not expect Greece to abolish this independence for the sake of the United States, thus violating the protection afforded under our law to a guest on our soil."

Extradition treaties are made with a view to returning fugitives from justice to the place where their crimes have been committed. Of course, our treaty with Greece gives that country no right to decide the merits or demerits of charges brought against Samuel Insull in Illinois. But that is, in effect, what the Greek courts attempted to do.

Since that time the authorities at Athens have been seeking a means of saving face while appeasing the United States. But even now there seems to be no intention of turning Insull over to the American authorities. He is merely to be ousted from Greece. If this fugitive is to be returned to the United States, some other country will have to take the responsibility for it.

Replying to C. W. J. on Debt Defaults.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have seen the letter of C. W. J. in your paper of December 19, 1933, and make the following reply to his "Speaking of Debt Defaults."

I. Virginia never repudiated her debt.

After the catacylsm of the war between the States, she was compelled to delay meeting her obligations and to peel off the tax receivable feature of the Consol act. But she capitalized the interest twice and with her creditors made a settlement, which the Supreme Court of the United States declared satisfactory to parties concerned, and known as the century settlement, because bonds ran 100 years, from 1892 to 1991, inclusive.

Viscount Goschen, chairman of "Repudiated Indebtedness of States Committee," omitted Virginia's name from such list of repudiating States. West Virginia was rived off and disclaimed any liability, and the old commonwealth, having settled with her creditors, took steps and succeeded in having West Virginia brought to book for their benefit, after more than 50 years; West Virginia being required and having paid about four million of principal, and ten and a quarter million of interest to the bondholders, their heirs and assigns.

II. In 1882, Gen. William Mahone led a party and passed an act, with the account of Virginia's debt as preamble, expressing the compound interest which had been put into the debt by the acts of 1866-7 and 1871, and declared the public debt of Virginia was about 21,000,000, instead of 30,000,000, as Virginia had declared in the acts of 1871, known as the Consol act.

In 1871, when Virginia's gross revenue was $2,800,000, she assumed to pay interest at 6 per cent on $30,000,000, with tax receivable coupons, i. e. to pay $1,800,000 per annum.

It was impossible. Then came the act of 1879, the McCullough act, equally impossible. Then the Riddleberger act of 1882, and the final settlement act of 1892. By that settlement, Virginia settled with all her creditors. She assumed $9,000,000 of Riddleberger 3 per cent bonds, issued under act of 1882, and, upon surrender of other old bonds, she issued, at the ratio of 19 to 28 (new for old), the century bonds at the rate of 2 per cent for the first 10 and 3 per cent for the remaining 90 years.

Subsequently, the West Virginia debt was settled by Virginia's action as mentioned.

And so Virginia, wrecked by the tornado of war; her territory dismembered; her slave labor gone; her plantations a wild waste; her white population crucified by the agony of poverty and distress, set her hand to the task and settled her debt made in her former prosperity, to the satisfaction of her creditors and to all who know the facts, except to someone who would like to appear wiser than those who know them. On Veterans' Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An article in The Post of December 17, by Lawrence F. Schmeckebier was nice for the public to read and digest, but not for one who is on the other side of the fence. The so-called soldiers' bonus was a "political move" to gain prestige and that is all it ever has been since its first introduction and will so continue until it is paid.

Has Mr. Schmeckebier ever had the thought that there were more men in the World War under American colors than in all American wars combined? Has he ever stopped to consider how many swivel chair warmers have been drawing funds from the United States Government who had not the right to do so? One instance alone of which the public heard a great deal, was the Wolfe Smith case—a man who was said to be drawing $9,000 a year and $187.50 retirement pay, and I understand he was in service 13 days. If there was that case, it stands to reason that there are hundreds of other such cases.

Has he stopped to think that there were over 300,000 veterans cut from the pay roll on July 1 of last year? But no attempt has been made to close any of the 50-odd regional offices throughout the country. Mr. Schmeckebier brings Mr. Douglas into his article and says he wants the budget balanced. Mr. Douglas and many others like him are doing plenty of worrying about what it will cost them if justice is done the "common herd" of this country. Did Mr. Douglas do any worrying about the budget in those days of '17 and '18 when the price of copper soared so high it was nearly the equivalent of gold?

Do you ever hear the National Economy League mentioning anything about the huge mail subsidies or the income-tax dodgers? The veterans who were justified in drawing compensation would never have made any complaint whatever if the Government had cut 25 per cent on compensations. Those having nice positions, drawing good yearly salaries, get their compensations raised, while those who had no income were cut. If that is called justice, it is a poor way of showing it to men who were willing to sacrifice their all for their country.

Our President has done some wonderful things. Every veteran is for him, for at least he has had the courage to try to rectify the muddled mess this country is in. He has made some mistakes. The one that interests the veteran the most is why did he, in some cases, take everything from the veterans to balance the budget and turn around and give it to 300,000 men of a younger generation? Why did he not enlist them in the Army at Army pay instead of nearly twice that salary? They have been granted more consideration as to compensation and hospitalization than any ex-soldier.

Men in the CCC who have not served 90 days receive more than a veteran who served five times that long. Is that justice?

It must be remembered that in '17 and '18 young men who were drafted into the service did not go of their own free will; they were taken from home and family because their country needed them. Why is it not right that they became charges on this Government? It was for their money lords then that we were dragged into the World War. It was the money lords who gained during the war and after. Why should they not now stand the expense?

The present session of Congress will mean a great deal to the whole country and when it is finished I am afraid it will be a sad day for the oppressor of the veteran and the common people and we will again have our rights which we so justly deserve.

Addison on Columnists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have no particular malice in sending you a quotation from Addison in condemnation of columnists. Your readers can readily decide for themselves whether or not the point is appropriate to the column which fills the right-hand-side of your excellent editorial page, on which you are at liberty to print the sage words of the eighteenth century essayist:

"But to drop the allegory before I have tried it out, there is no species of scribblers more offensive, and more incurable, than your periodical writers, whose work returns upon the public on certain days and at stated times. We have not the consolation in the perusal of these authors which we find at the reading of others; namely, that we are sure if we have but patience we may come to the end of their labors. I have often admired a humorous saying of Diogenes, who, reading a dull author to several of his friends, whenever one began to be tired, finding he was almost come to a blank leaf at the end of it, cried, 'Courage, lads, I see land!' On the contrary, our progress through that kind of writers I am now speaking of is never at an end. One day makes work for another; we do not know when to promise ourself a rest." R. L. B.

Let Not Him That Girdeth His Harness Boast Himself as He That Putteth It Off

By Robert Quillen.

No lash that falls on the sinner's back cuts deeper than the contemptuous criticism of self-righteous people who never have been tempted.

One man's wrong-doing can not be excused by saying that others would have done the same thing, but those who never have been tempted as he was are not qualified to judge him.

For three years we have listened to the angry denunciation of men who cut corners to save themselves from bankruptcy and ruin.

That they deserved every hard epithet is beyond question. And certainly their victims paid a great price for the privilege of denouncing them. But who else can qualify to throw a stone?

There are many who are honest in great matters but less scrupulous in small ones.

One of the reformers who helped to cleanse Cincinnati of dishonor and graft resigned from the committee because the boys wouldn't "fix" a $2 parking ticket for him.

A man will frown upon a trifling violation of honor by another, but think the same act blameless if done by his highly respectable self.

His feeling of righteousness takes the curse off.

Bankers who berated the Government for violating its "sacred obligations" felt no less respectable when they broke their promise to support the wrecked Harriman.

All men are inherently capable of theft and it doesn't change matters to pretend that they aren't.

Good sportsmanship in fighting is for those who aren't desperate. Fighting for his life, the most gallant foe will hit below the belt.

Nice rules of warfare are forgotten when a nation has its back to the wall, and poison gas and submarines are dishonorable only while the enemy has a monopoly of their use.

Respectable men obey ethical rules rather well in ordinary times, but only those with honor bred in the bone can resist temptation when dishonor promises salvation and honor means certain loss of everything else.

The rogue must be punished. Justice, swift and dreadful, is the very backbone of civilization.

But pity the man who fell. You might share his chains if you had shared his temptation.

BARGERON.

IF there is one thing c... in the consideration of ... so-called dollar-devalua... bill, said by authorities t... one of the most important pieces of legislation since the Civil War, it is that the opponents need a Charlie Dawes, somebody that can shout loud and yell "Hell and Maria!" They have been fooling around for more than a week, and the country at large has no more idea of what their real opposition is than a man in the moon.

Now, for one thing, they have a strong suspicion that one of the main purposes of the bill, an accomplishment, anyway, is to displace the Federal Reserve Syste... as the arbiter of the country's credit structure and place it in the hands of the Treasury Secretary, which means the President.

• • • •

Yet they don't attack on this point; or, rather, they do so in scarcely audible whispers. There was Mr. Owen D. Young, a man of resonant voice, but who when he was before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, couched this suspicion in such qualifying language as to leave hardly any impress on anyone who had not been of his mind in the first place.

Said he, for example, in words about like this: "I fear that if you are not very careful, you will, perhaps unintentionally, destroy the reserve system."

I don't think that was the financier's real view on that of other bankers or of the opponents of the bill generally. I don't think their view embraces any "perhaps unintentionally" as to the purpose of the bill. I think they believe this is what the Administration deliberately wants to do.

It is not a point of whether they are right or wrong. The question is why they don't say in a manner that everybody can hear what they really think. Weasel words won't get them anywhere with the bellowing voices which they have against them.

They make a big issue of w... a board of five or simply th... ury secretary shall administe... $2,000,000,000 fund with which ... are to gamble with Great B... and France. Board, all Presidential appoi... and two other men to be ... by the President ... see why they m... of this and conversely why t... ministration opposes it so feeling...

It may be that Governor Black of the Reserve Board is the contention. Carter Glass said yesterday that he has turned out to be one of the best governors the board has ever had. This means that in the Senator's opinion he is not subservient to the Administration. There is another committee change in the bill in connection with the board set-up that also may explain the Administration's opposition. The $2,000,000,000 fund is confined solely to stabilization operations. If the Administration stands out against this limitation, considerable weight will be given to the co... tion of the opponents that ... of the primary purposes of the ... is to get control of the credi... chinery.

In the meantime, we of th... letariat might well give att... to the attitude of such men as ... D. Young. I don't like it. ... think the bill is full of dyn... and say so. But they don't ... wrought up about it.

The organist was noted throughout the county for her ability as an accompanist. The story is told that on one occasion a visiting soloist accidentally turned two pages in the hymnal, but Mrs. Baker improvised an accompaniment and the song remained unbroken.

Gas 'Bootlegging' Nets $100 Fines

Virginian Brought It Into State, Paid No Tax.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Stanley Cooley, of Strasburg, a former gasoline and oil distributer of Middletown, near here, was fined $50 and given a suspended jail sentence of three months on each of two charges here yesterday on charges of "bootlegging" gasoline into this State, tax free.

State Officer Raymond E. Bayliss said Cooley was operating a large tank truck on which there was no legal stamp to denote the company and brand of gasoline he was distributing. Woman Fancier Of Police Dogs Capital Guest

Mrs. Dorothy Harrison Eustis will arrive in Washington this evening to be the guest for several days of Mrs. Anne Archbold. Mrs. Eustis is now making her home in Morristown, N. J., where she will soon open her famous kennels for the training of German shepherd dogs, the headquarters of which are now at Fortunate Fields, near Mount Pelerin, in Switzerland.

Shortly after the war the German government established the first training school for guide dogs at Potsdam in an effort to help with the rehabilitation of Germany's war blind. The dogs were trained in four months and then given to blind soldiers with an allowance for their upkeep.

Mrs. Eustis studied this school and decided to begin a similar work on her estate in Switzerland. She always had been interested in the training of animals. The intelligence of the shepherd dogs and the possibilities open to those interested in their training especially attracted the interest of Mrs. Eustis. Gentle dogs are trained to lead the blind, and more aggressive dogs have been used by the Swiss army and in prisons for night duty with the guards. The Pennsylvania constabulary uses a number of the dogs for police work.

hool 'Problem Conduct' Blamed Chiefly on Poverty

Lucy Madeira Wing, Famous Educator, Holds Antisocial Habits of Children May Ultimately Be Traced to Their Parents.

his is another of the interviews with well known Washington cators, in which they discuss causes contributing to the increase he number of problem children in District schools. The Post comes letters from our readers giving their opinion on the ject.

Such is the opinion of Mrs. Lucy leira Wing, veteran educator head of the famous Madeira ool in Fairfax County, Va.

"When we eliminate poverty, I ve that we shall have elimied most of the major problems childhood," Mrs. Wing said, yesrday.

"Back of everything, of course, the parent; his own self-conde and his own point of view, in er it is superficial or fine.

I do believe that the abolition Coverty would aid parents to acuire many of those qualities which ney need in bringing up children. "A sense of security means a sane utlook on life for the majority of arents, and therefore the proper tmosphere in the home."

Indifferent Parents.

fixing poverty as the cause for ntious and antisocial conduct ng children, Mrs. Wing differs n Miss Jessie La Salle, assistant erintendent of District schools, o places the blame at the door careless and indifferent parents, ny of them well-to-do.

In an interview given The Post oman's Page two weeks ago, Miss e Salle deplored the increasing umber of problem children in ashington schools. Denied adeuate play space and opportunity or wholesome physical and social growth, city children of today may e mentally warped adults of toorrow, unless schools are given e needed cooperation of parents averting such disaster, she rned. She told of children of 7 8, who were carrying their latch keys and letting themes into homes where no one ted to welcome them. The maty of mothers of elementary ool-age children are working, said.

Mrs. Wing agreed with Miss Lale that children need the companionship of their own parents.

"Nothing can ever take the place of the companionship of children with their parents," said Mrs. Wing. "There are, of course, well-to-do people who do not pay much attention to their children; who leave them to governesses, nurses and servants; but I believe that many of the children in the homes of our well-to-do are carefully and thoughtfully brought up.

"I believe, too, as every one who thinks about the matter must believe, that nearly all the problems of childhood are settled in the home —unless there are conditions in the home which can not be controlled.

"From what I have read and observed in a general way about the problem child and about divided natures, I should say the difficulty lay chiefly with poverty. I believe that poverty is the great cause of nearly all the difficulties of mankind."

Curled Ostrich Popular, Thanks To Mae West

Fluffy Feathers Appear Again on Formal Dresses.

Say what you will about the Mae West influence on fashions, the buxom blonde undoubtedly played an important part in bringing back curled ostrich to an honored place in the current mode. The fluffy feathers are adorning many of the smart new evening gowns for spring.

One of the most striking of these costumes is a black and white printed satin gown in leaf design with an elbow-length cape made entirely of black ostrich. This use of ostrich with prints is as novel as it is striking. Sometimes the designs are extremely gay, as a white background liberally covered with bright-colored flowers in which red predominates. The red is repeated in flaming ostrich that borders a matching capelet.

These soft feathers are used at the bottom of some of the new gowns as well as the top. Pastel ones have deep flounces of ostrich in matching shades. Those in brilliant hues usually have contrasting feather flounces. Both types are extremely graceful and attractive if the upper part of the gown is plain. The flounces flutter engagingly when the wearer is dancing and cling to the body when she is merely walking or standing.

When Colors Change.

By Katherine Smith.

His eyes are brown, and deepening
To black when subtle pigments shade
Their depths, and hers are blue—if soft
With candlelight, the blue is grayed

Alluringly. And as for mine,
When they have all too swiftly seen
The change in his and hers, I find
My own two eyes are turning green!

Artist Praises "Sophisticated" Women of U. S.

Fritz Werner, of Vienna, Is Sure America Alone Has This Type.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—America is the only country in the world that has really sophisticated women.

Such is the opinion of Fritz Werner, the Viennese painter, who yesterday declared that American women were not only the most sophisticated and the most beautiful, but also the most interested.

Mr. Werner ought to know. He has studied the women of all countries, not with the superficial glance of the traveler, but with the eyes of an artist who sizes his subjects up for his palette and brush.

As he stood in the midst of his first New York exhibition, he said, with a glance around the room at the groups of attractive young girls who were studying the pictures: "So many girls are beautiful at first glance. But there must be something else before we want to paint them. There must be that thing called personality, and a kind of psychological attraction which belongs to the sophisticated woman.

"In America one runs across this constantly. In Europe—almost never!"

The reason, he said, seems to be that American girls are allowed more freedom of action and thought than their European sisters.

"They go into a drug store for their lunch, and what do they do?" he said, ecstatically. "They chat with the waiters!

"In Vienna the girls are, what shall I say——" He backed away in the manner of our little Nell of the old melodrama days—"don't come too close!"

Werner drew graphite sketches of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, son and daughter-in-law of the President, while they were his fellow passengers on the Rex. He sent copies to the White House at Christmas time, and yesterday received "a very nice letter" of thanks from the President.

He has painted royalty in Europe and Egypt, South American beauties in Buenos Aires, and his first job in America was the queen of the New Orleans Mardi Gras, Miss Yvonne White.

Nowhere is the versatility of the modern women demonstrated more conclusively than in the lives led by women of the diplomatic corps in Washington. Carrying on their shoulders the tremendous responsibility of official and personal social obligations in one of the most important capitals of the world, these women, nevertheless devise opportunity for expressing individual talents as well.

This is the fourth interview in a series with diplomatic hostesses in Washington, giving an insight into the personalities of these charming and gifted women.

By Elizabeth Young.

Although the demands of her position as wife of the Ambassador From Argentina leave her little time for writing, Senora de Espil, author of two successful books, hopes to do at least one more.

She wants to write the biography of an heroic woman. She would love, she says, to tell the story of some woman who, with much less than ordinary advantages, had climbed to such heights as to have left behind her everlasting fame.

"For the encouragement of every woman—and all of us need encouragement at times—I would like to show how such a woman had had all the troubles and difficulties of the ordinary woman's life, its small advantages, if any at all, and had climbed above them to express the greatness within herself," Senora de Espil told a representative of The Post Woman's Page yesterday.

She would do it in tribute to the great and simple women she has met in the course of an interesting life which has taken her from a girlhood in Washington's smartest social circles, to the frozen wastes of northernmost Alaska and Siberia, back at intervals to plantation life in Mississippi and finally to her present post as wife of the ambassador of one of the most important countries in the world.

Glimpses of Writers.

Such a story, she feels, might help the small-town woman, settling down with a feeling of "What's the use?" because of her limited opportunities. She recalled the inspiring example which the accomplishments of George Eliot and the Bronte sisters have set for women and quoted from Virginia Woolf's book, "A Room of One's Own."

"In a few short pages, Virginia Woolf has given the most enchanting glimpse of the possibilities for greatness in any woman's life," she said. "She shows us Charlotte Bronte and George Eliot, creating literature not in a sound-proof room, like Proust, but, in the case of the elder Bronte sister, seated in the front parlor surrounded by brothers and sisters, stopping to cook three meals a day."

With regard to her own duties as wife of an ambassador, she said:

"When I realize I am keeping house for a country, not just for myself, it gives me a tremendous feeling of responsibility.

"One of the nicest things about the diplomat's life, I am finding, "is that indefinably one gets away from the restless American pace of things."

Charm of Her Home.

The dignified Old World charm of the room in which she sat lent voiceless support to her statement. Beautiful pieces of eighteenth century English furniture, picked up by Senora de Espil over a period of years, were the dominating motif of the scene.

Senora de Espil has taken up the study of Spanish since her marriage several months ago to the Argentine Ambassador and retains a keen interest in the journalistic profession, in which she once turned her writing talent to good account. She did a feature series of philosophical and adventure narratives for a Chicago daily newspaper, and contributed to nationally known magazines.

Her first book, "The Cruise of the Northern Light," was a spirited account of a scientific expedition she accompanied into the Arctic to bring back bears, walrus, seals and birds to the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago. This was followed by "Adventures in a Man's World," an amusing account of her adventures afield with dog, gun and horse—in those sports generally accepted as being more masculine than feminine.

Granddaughter of Senator.

"I wrote it from the point of view of the beginner," she said. "I don't consider my self a sportswoman at all, although I adore the woods and streams. I love the outof-doors for the rest, the peace, the happiness, the pleasure, it gives. To me, a real vacation is not going to Europe, but getting away into the woods and fields."

She finds it amusingly coincidental that life should have brought her back so nearly to the spot where she sent part of her girlhood. Daughter of the late Frank Letts and of Mrs. Letts, whose house is on Massachusetts avenue, and granddaughter of the late United States Senator Bishop W. Perkins, of Kansas, the former Courtney Letts made her debut in 1919 in a house just around the corner from her present home.

Milk Aids Beauty, Producers Told

Health Director Denies It Retards Reducing.

Richmond, Jan. 24 (AP).—Milk is an aid to beauty, a preserver of youth, as well as man's most important food, delegates to the Virginia Dairy Products Association's twentieth annual convention were told here by Miss Aibyn Chinn, health education director of the National Dairy Council.

Milk is not fattening, but is recommended for those who go in for reducing exercises, Miss Chinn said. "Our slogan," she said, "is that 'Milk builds you up while it scales you down.'"

Children as well as adults are taught the value of milk by physicians, teachers and health authorities, she said, as she outlined efforts of cooperative educational bodies to increase consumption of dairy products.

Doris Stevens Hails Feminist Pact Victory

Pan-American Agreement Called "Landmark in Women's Fight."

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Doris Stevens, feminist leader, came back from South America today jubilant because the recent Pan-American Conference at Montevideo was "the first conference that ever has said women are as important as debts and tariffs."

Coming up the bay on the liner Santa Barbara, she told interviewers that this recognition of the claims of women was "far and away the most significant event of the seventh Pan-American Conference."

As chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, Miss Stevens led the fight at the conference for women's equality rights.

She termed the conference "a landmark in women's fight for liberty" in four countries—Uruguay, Paraguay, Ecuador and Cuba—which signed an equal rights treaty.

Old Laws Scrapped.

This treaty, which her commission proposed, will abolish all the old distinctions between men and women in the laws of these countries.

"It is the first time in history that States have agreed to outlaw unequal treatment of their women by international action," she said.

She credited the Montevideo Conference with the first piece of international feminist legislation ever to be adopted over a large portion of the earth.

She referred, she explained, to the equal nationality convention, which all the delegations at the conference, except Venezuela, signed.

Inheritance Changed.

This measure guaranteed to mothers as well as fathers the right to transmit nationality to their children, she explained.

Equal nationality is but one part of the equal rights treaty, which she said, "We had hoped to get signed by all countries."

"It would have been wonderful if the United States had led in the fight for this treaty," she said. "But what the United States did satisfies me. I am full of praise for what President Roosevelt did."

Miss Stevens plans to return at once to Washington. Her commission will turn its attention, she said, to getting the newly made treaties on women's rights ratified.

Dr. Knapp to Address Democratic Women

Will Dr. George L. Knapp, of the editorial staff of Labor, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the education section of the Women's National Democratic Club at 11 a. m. Thursday.

Dr. Knapp will discuss the "Legislative High Lights" for the last month. Since the convening of Congress the discussion of important happenings on Capitol Hill has become a regular monthly feature of the education section program. Mrs. Edward P. Costigan is chairman of the section. Mrs. H. H. Clement, vice chairman, will preside.

How to Be Happy Taught at Vassar

An Institute of Euthenics Trains Parents and Their Children.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

A full and joyous life is the rightful heritage of every person in the world. And the persons who find happiness in such a life are those who have developed the resources within themselves.

Such a philosophy lies back of a social and educational experiment now being conducted at Vassar College. It is known as the Institute of Euthenics.

Alarmed by the growing restlessness and maladjustment prevalent today the officials of Vassar College instituted this campaign against the "pleasure hound." They are having great success, and they believe that in another 100 years the man or woman who is entirely dependent upon external factors for his pleasure will be as rare as a dinosaur.

Applied Knowledge.

"In the Institute of Euthenics we teach people to apply their knowledge of arts and sciences to the betterment of living," Mrs. Fay M. Stockwell, field secretary for the institution, said yesterday.

"The people who come to the Euthenics Institute each summer have definite problems which they are trying to solve," she said. "Either they seek help in equipping their children to live in the best possible way, or they themselves want to learn to live more satisfactorily and effectively.

"Whole families come to this school," Mrs. Stockwell continued. "While the fathers and mothers live apart and pursue their studies the children live in dormitories and are given expert attention. We have a nursery school for the very small children and a progressive school of the older ones.

School Value to Parents.

"The value of this school for the parents is that it gives them the opportunity to view their children objectiyely, to study their individual needs, and to encourage their development along the lines of citizenship and social consciousness."

Mrs. Stockwell then explained the program of education for children as carried out in the institute.

"We do not believe in pounding things into children's heads," she said. "We let them learn through experience. When they want to know where milk comes from we take them down and let them see the cows being milked. If they want to know how it gets to the city we let them watch it being canned and shipped. They are encouraged to build things for themselves, to amuse themselves through creative effort, to develop their own talents for living. We believe that children trained in this manner will always be able to entertain themselves, and that they will develop an intellectual curiosity which will cause them to fine life richer."

Results Held "Amazing."

"The adults are interested in learning how to keep informed about the main currents in our constantly changing civilization. They feel that unless they learn to incorporate the findings of science and art into their daily lives, much of the effort expended in research has been futile. They want to interpret this research in the life about them.

"The results of this education in euthenics have been almost amazing," Mrs. Stockwell concluded.

Developing of Resources for Joy Within Is Taught Pupils.

"Many persons come realizing that in some way they have failed to get the greatest joy out of living. They go away with knowledge which they can use to make each day one of happiness. Some come as scoffers and go away to tell others about their new understanding of their problems and their simple solution. We feel that euthenics will some day become a necessary part of everyone's education."

Rich Tea Gown of Caramina

Decidedly in the regal manner is this tea gown designed by Jessie Franklin Turner. The draping looks exceedingly complex, but is really very simple, as the gown is in one piece. Caramina, a heavy dull crepe in a rich red that is called "East India" is the material. Note the interesting sleeves.

Woman Official Admires Progress of Puerto Ricans

When Mrs. Jean Springstead Whittemore was appointed collector of customs in Puerto Rico, the leading island bootlegger offered her his sincere sympathy.

"Poor lady," he said compassionately, "you will never be able to catch anybody."

"And that," said Mrs. Whittemore at the Mayflower yesterday, "is typical of the Puerto Rican. He is so courteous and considerate of women by nature that he has sympathy even for those who are his legal enemies.

"You know," she added "the Puerto Ricans are wonderful people. I have been working among them for 15 years, and I have nothing but sincere admiration for them.

"Only a year ago the women first voted in Puerto Rico. At that time, their enthusiasm was so great that the time allotted for registration had to be extended for a whole day in order that the women might all register.

"A year later they elected their first woman representative to their Legislature. She is Miss Marie Luisa Arcelay, and it is encouraging to note that she is the very highest type of Puerto Rican woman. The men in her home town are as proud of her as are the women, and they entertain lavishly for her whenever she returns."

Mrs. Whittemore said that one of her greatest interests is in developing the artistic nature of the island inhabitants.

"They are talented artists," she said, "and I feel that they have a wealth of material in their traditions and folklore. Nothing expresses the real Puerto Rico better than the Spanish architecture which is used there. Recently they have been putting up skyscrapers and modernistic buildings. I think that is unfortunate, but I understand that it is because they are trying to be progressive.

Crime Gangs Unknown.

"One of the most remarkable and admirable things about the inhabitants of Puerto Rico is that there is no planned crime there. Highway robberies, kidnapings and gangster warfares are unknown in that land. Persons think nothing of walking through the streets with huge amounts of money in their hands. They know there is no danger of robbery. I sincerely hope that in their eagerness to imitate Anglo-Saxon standards they will not acquire our criminal methods.

"Even the lawbreakers in Puerto Rico have their standards about what is gentlemanly and permissible," Mrs. Whittemore concluded. "It is often rather funny. Once we arrested some bootleggers and handcuffed them. The leader came to me in great indignation and assured me that the men who worked for him were real gentlemen and it was not necessary to handcuff them."

New Wolf-Collar Tweed Coat

A big, bad wolf has yielded his hide for the collar of a dashing tweed coat, designed by Helen Cookman. It is just the thing to wear when the weather is too warm for a heavy fur coat and yet too cool for a spring suit. The striking diagonal pattern gives the wearer a tall, slender appearance.

School Sets High Job-Finding Rate

8 Out of 10 Graduates Are Placed in 3 Years.

Farmville, Va., Jan. 24 (AP).—Approximately 80 per cent of the diploma and degree graduates of State Teachers College for the past three years have obtained positions in their field, it was announced here today.

College officials said they considered this percentage particularly outstanding because of the depression. The class of 1931 showed the highest percentage.

The survey showed that there was little difference between the ability of diploma and degree graduates to obtain employment. The percentage for all diploma graduates for the three-year period is 78; for the degree graduates, 80.

Heavy "Undies" Return For Use as Ski Suits

Hillsboro, N. H., Jan. 24 (AP). Heavy woolen underwear is coming back; underwear the type granpa sported; underwear so thick it would almost stop a bullet. Hillsboro mills report an increased demand for those old-fashioned blue woolens with white satin piping and pearl buttons.

The sudden demand comes from the younger gencration. The youngsters are wearing them as ski suits, to be pulled on over the customary skiing costuma.

Swiss Expert Discovers New 'Youth' Secret

By Ruth Anne Davis.

From a far off little village perch high in the most mountainous section of Switzerland came a rumor of a wonderful formula which was said to hold the secret of eternal youth. A recluse chemist was said to have discovered it and to have changed from a bent and wrinkled old man into a handsome stripling.

By the time the tale reached the ears of an American beauty expert who was traveling in Europe it was even more far-fetched. But the expert was a woman with a great deal of experience, and nodding wisely to one of her colleagues, she said: "Where there is smoke there must be fire!"

She began an intensive investigation and found that a Swiss chemist while experimenting in a small village had discovered a substance which was excellent for erasing wrinkles, molding contours and refining the texture of the skin. The American beauty expert, realizing the value of her find, immediately bought the formula, began manufacturing the preparation and sent the news to her salons, located in nearly all the principal cities of Europe and America.

Any woman with a middle-aged look, any woman with flabby muscles, wrinkles, sallow skin and other imprints of time should welcome the opportunity to sweep away the years by means of this new treatment.

The subject relaxes in a reclining chair while expert hands cleanse the skin and apply skin-nourishing preparations. Then the new substance is applied and left on the face for ten minutes, during which time it becomes dry and firm. After it is removed, and the skin toned and soothed, the entire countenance has miraculously lost its middle-age look and taken on the freshness and glow of youth.

These treatments may be taken singly or in a group. They are always varied slightly to suit the individual. An expert who will be glad to give frank beauty advice is always available. Call and we'll tell you more.

What looked at first like a silver filigree pumpkin proved on closer inspection to be an English biscuit box excellent to have on hand at tea time to keep the buns, rolls, muffins, or tea cakes warm.

This one was unique. It unfolded into three compartments each designed to hold the breads. When they are in place and wrapped in a warm napkin, they stay as warm and fresh as they're intended to be.

A dish or "box" of this kind is designed not only for the beauty which makes it a work of art, but to act as right hand man to the hostess who realizes nothing can spoil her tea party like cold stale-looking breads.

There are several types of biscuit boxes, all of them patterned after old English originals.

A copper bowl held in a brass ring against a burnished reflector is the very newest thing in wall vases. For ivy or any trailing and bunchy green thing it has a twofold value. The reddish gold of the copper is a beautiful contrast to the color of the plant. The bright reflector which catches the sunlight and combines its sheen with the reflection of the plant is truly artistic.

These are designed to hang on the wall in any room of the house. During winter they add life to a room through their fresh green and goldness. In summer they can be transformed into bits of brightness by charming bouquets of cut flowers.

A local gift shop has some cocktail sets which give us a start or two. We welcome them as exponents of new cocktail designs. The set includes a tall glass "churn" painted in blue with a picture of a sailing vessel. Cups which can be bought in any number are also blue and boat trimmed.

Eau de cologne, which has a delightful fragrance, comes in exceptionally quaint little containers. Medium-sized bottles are almost completely covered with a woven straw cover, giving the whole thing an interesting, provincial look.

It is made from the formula in possession of a famous German chemist, a specialist in perfumes.

If the people of medieval times used fire bellows, we're prone to believe they resembled those featured now in a Connecticut avenue shop. These are made of antique-looking imitation leather, with a rough, crude surface which delights us. The deep tones of color add an enchanting richness.

For the large, rustic stone fireplace we can think of nothing more delightful than these bellows to hang by the side or rest on the hearth.

Hair which has been permanently waved and has a decided tendency to be coarse and dry will show a radical improvement if a certain permanent wave oil is used on it.

Besides remedying the quality of hair, it is excellent for bringing out the soft waves and giving them a natural look.

Objectors to College Military Training Called 'Anarchists' by Legion Commander

Seek to Smash National Defense, Conference of Women Told.

Men students at land-grant colleges and universities who object to taking military training were labeled "anarchists at heart" by Edward A. Hayes, National commander of the American Legion, in his address last night at the Mayflower Hotel, at the opening session of the ninth Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

"The conscientious objector who insists upon attending a land grant school does so for one reason and one only. He wants to break up the National defense system of the United States," Commander Hayes told an audience of 1,000 persons, 700 of whom were delegates.

"The student who objects to military training should go to a college or university that is consistent with his ideas on the subject and which does not furnish such training. But when he attends a land-grant school he says, in effect, 'I will not obey the law.' That makes him an anarchist in theory because it is the law and it is the obligation of a university that has accepted land and funds from the Government to insist that every male student put in a few hours weekly for two years, fitting himself so that he can serve the Nation, if the need arises, but without pledging him to such service."

Parade of Flags.

His talk was preceded by an address on "American Patriotism" by Lieut. Col. Ulysses S. Grant and by a colorful ceremony in which the flags of 37 participating organizations were advanced in an elaborate processional. Mrs. William H. Biester, jr., chairman of the conference and National president of the American Legion Auxiliary, welcomed the delegates. The response was given by Mrs. William E. Ochiltree, National president of American War Mothers.

Other speakers at the opening session were Senator David A. Reed, from Pennsylvania, and Admiral W. H. Standley, chief of naval operations, U. S. Navy. Each speaker warned of the dangers America is facing through inadequate defense and through a lack of patriotic feeling during times of peace.

Commander Hayes believes that pacifist students do damage to patriotic ideals in their objections to military training in the R. O. T. C.

"We who have been in the service know better than anyone else that a fault-finding, conscientious objector is the last person that either the Army or the Navy wants in its armed forces," Mr. Hayes said. "He is not wanted in the R. O. T. C. and he is not wanted in the land grant colleges. All he wants to do is to create a martyrdom for himself."

"Questionable" Heroism.

"This questionable form of heroism appeals to certain students if they get a twisted conception that it is courageous. When it is thoroughly understood that the student who seeks something for nothing at the expense of the Government is no more nor less than on the same plane with the slacker in war time, then we will have taken away from him his self-styled, self-imposed martyrdom. He is as much a profiteer in his small mean way of seeking to get an education from Government funds without giving in return a few hours of training which is good for him, as is the man who, when the Nation is in war, manipulates contracts that amass him a personal fortune."

Commander Hayes advocated universal service as the most effective means of doing away with war in the future.

"The legion hopes to see the principle of universal service enacted into the basic law of the land because it will do away with all those avaricious, greedy, money grabbing individuals who told the soldiers of 1917 such a beautiful story of how much they would do for them when they came back from the trenches," he said. "It will remove any possibility of money being made out of millions of boys being sent into battle. In other words, it will do away with the profiteer."

Full Treaty Navy Asked.

"Under the principle of universal service there will be no placing of a premium upon talents employed in some shipyard. There will be no putting of a premium because somebody is selling leather or other material to the Government and piling millions upon millions of dollars in his own bank account. Every one will be upon a plane of equality. I need not tell you what that will do to prevent war," he concluded.

Admiral W. H. Standley declared that the main function of the Navy was to act as economic life-insurance for the Nation's foreign and domestic commerce and to be ready to protect the United States and its possessions at all times and under any conditions. He urged that the Navy be increased to the size apportioned the United States by the treaties of naval limitation.

"It ought to be obvious that what rival nations are willing to concede as naval limits for us is none too big for our legitimate purposes," he said. "Not only do we need more ships to bring us up to the treaty quota. A building replacement program is just as necessary, not only for the sake of efficiency but for economy. Neither a feast nor a famine in shipbuilding best serves the national need of governmental economy."

The conference will continue through Friday.

War Mothers' Leader Urges U. S. Defense

Sees Surest Guarantee of Peace Through Preparedness.

The mother is the most patriotic member of the family. It is she who furnishes the men who fight our battles, and it is she who must defend the fireside while wars are being waged, according to Mrs. William E. Ochiltree, of Connersville, Ind., National president of American War Mothers.

MRS. OCHILTREE.

The fact that they always bear the brunt of war has given mothers decided ideas on the way to secure peace, Mrs. Ochiltree believes. She, as first vice chairman, is taking an active part in the ninth Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

"We War Mothers believe the way to keep our country out of war is to have an adequate defense program," she said. "I, myself, have believed in National defense for years, even before my two boys went to war. Now that the country is at peace I am in favor of it more than ever, because it is the way to keep peace."

Both of the Ochiltree boys came back from France, but one of them died several years after the armistice from injuries he suffered overseas.

"If I had any young sons today, boys of college age, I should certainly want them to take military training," declared Mrs. Ochiltree. "Then, if we should be involved in another war, they would have at least some preparation for military life."

Pen League Head To Be Entertained

Mrs. Heflebower Luncheon Honor Guest Today.

Mrs. Frank Hodges Clark will entertain at a buffet luncheon today in her apartment at the Dresden in honor of Mrs. Clara Keck Heflebower, of Cincinnati, Ohio, national president, League of American Pen Women. Neill, Mrs. Charles Pinkney Clark, Mrs. Charles J Parish, Miss Agnes Winn, Mrs. Samuel M. Foes of Army Training Unwanted in Grant Schools, He Says.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If January 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:45 to 8:45 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 12 noon, and from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m.

If you were born on January 25, you have a very positive nature. Being a very fast thinker, you quickly reach a decision, and once you have definitely made up your mind, it is almost impossible to convert you to any other viewpoint. It might be well for you to guard against being accused of being "mulish." Be careful and not allow yourself to get in an irritated state of mind on this date, for if you do, you very probably may find yourself in a quarrel which will cause many hours of remorse.

The child born on January 25, as soon as it can walk and talk, will develop a streak of stubbornness, which must be tactfully combated. This trait can be overcome very shortly by using patience and logical reasoning. Do not attempt to drive this child, or by fear of punishment, force it to do something. Persuade it, by appealing to its very affectionate disposition, and its desire not to make you unhappy. This child will have a sensitive disposition, and have a great deal of love for its kindred.

If a woman, and you were born on January 25, you indulge in a great deal of dreaming, although you are practical when it comes to household and business affairs. It would be well if you refrain from forming a definite opinion of people, when you meet them for the first time. You are too apt to form an erroneous idea regarding their personality. Remember that you can not always judge a person, just casually meeting them, for you may unknowingly do them a great injustice.

A man, born on January 25, has very strong likes and dislikes. If you were born on January 25, you must be careful not to allow yourself to become unduly prejudiced against a person by some unimportant little personal characteristic which happens not to meet with your approval. Your business will bring you in close contact with the public, and your future advancement will depend largely on how they respond to the treatment they receive. Try and remember courtesy costs nothing and is always appreciated.

New Shoe Styles Sport Bows at Heel

Ribbon Matching Color of Dress Held in Loops.

New York (AP).—The back of the shoe will have no reason to feel slighted this spring. In keeping with the extensive use of bows at the back of dresses, new footwear styles include dainty little bows at the heels.

In some of the styles this new heel bow is of ribbon matching the dress in color and carried through loops at the side of the shoe.

Shankless kid opera pumps, with no sole under the arch, are another innovation in footwear fashions—one on which a designer is said to have spent five years of experimentation. Instead of a sole the upper of the shoe is brought down under the arch and seamed.

The absence of the shank is supposed to make the foot at least one size smaller.

How to Keep Well

Dr. W. A. Evans.

A Treatment for Colds.

The most popular drug in the treatment of the common cold is aspirin, known also as a cetyl salicylic acid. This drug is a modification of the well-known salicylic acid widely used for the relief of the discomforts of rheumatic disorders. Salicylic acid and the salicylates were so apt to cause nausea, loss of appetite, sometimes head noises and dizziness, and occasionally other unpleasant symptoms, that the chemists sought to find a substitute that could be more easily taken and would have less tendency to cause unpleasant after effects—with the result that they offered aspirin. The drug, under one name or another, speedily became popular. In 1917 a Government drug official gave it as his opinion that aspirin was more widely used than all other copyrighted drugs combined.

Whatever the source of discomfort, many people had the habit of taking a dose or two of aspirin. It seemed such a simple thing to do, the urge to take something was strong, and there were seldom any unpleasant after effects. One of the common uses was in the treatment of the acute or febrile stage of the common cold.

A report of a clinical experiment made with the student body of the University of Minnesota during one winter by Dr. H. S. Diehl shows that acetyl salicylic acid in the treatment of the common cold is of no service. When given in competition with a placebo—sugar of milk—it was found to be no better and no worse than that useless substance. This result indicates that taking aspirin for the relief of the symptoms of an acute cold is something of a pastime, doing no good except as it satisfies the urge to do something.

Dr. Diehl's investigation of cures for colds extended to soda. He found that taking bicarbonate of soda for the relief of symptoms and for the cure of the cold accomplished nothing. The sufferers who used it did not get back to work any earlier than did those who took milk sugar.

He also investigated the efficacy of the fruit juice treatment. Of the three methods of treatment, that by fruit juice was the most pleasant. It appealed most to the palate, but that was about all that could be said in its favor. The students who used it got well no quicker, had no less of the tailing of days or weeks of mucopurulent discharge and aches and discomforts of the febrile stage of the disorder.

Dr. Diehl did not attempt to solve the age-old question as to whether a cold was to be starved or fed. He was occupied with testing the curative action of Dover's powders, and had to reserve investigation of the hunger treatment for a later day.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British home secretary, has refused to reprieve Cecil Brandt, doomed to the gallows for slaying a friend of his wife. Returning to London from a visit in the country, Sir Humphrey is captured by a mysterious band of masked men. The leader tells him he will be hanged unless he grants a reprieve to Brandt. Sir Humphrey is placed on a gallows, hemp rope about his neck. A messenger arrives with word that Brandt's wife is at Rossiter's London home, eager to tell the truth about the shooting to save her husband, who is to die early the next morning.

Rossiter is released. At London, Mrs. Brandt—one of his closest friends—tells him that her husband shot Gervase Benham because of jealousy. Finding his suspicions unjustified Brandt ordered his wife to preserve silence to shield herself.

Assured by Sir Humphrey that he will grant a reprieve, Mrs. Brandt departs. The home secretary picks up his telephone to call Wandsworth Prison—and, overwrought with the events of the night, collapses in a deep faint. When he regains consciousness it is broad daylight. He inquires about Brandt. His doctor tells him Brandt had been hanged at 8 o'clock that morning.

Visiting Mrs. Brandt many weeks later, Sir Humphrey hears her voice the conviction that her husband was insane and did not want to live. Later Sir Humphrey visits Scotland Yard and reveals the story of his abduction by the mysterious band the night before Brandt's execution.

"Smithers," he instructed, "you had better return in half an hour and bring me up two men upon whom you can thoroughly rely—Simpson, I should think, for one. The choice of the other I leave to you. The three of you will have to go down to Norfolk tonight upon a special mission which I will explain to you later. Make your preparations at once, if you please."

The inspector saluted and withdrew. The subcommissioner turned toward Rossiter.

"Smithers is one of the best men we have here," he confided. "He has an unfailing memory and, though he has had some tough cases to deal with, he seldom makes a mistake."

"Seems an intelligent fellow," Sir Humphrey commented. "Now, tell me, both of you, what do you think of my story?"

"I think it is one of the most amazing I ever heard outside the pages of fiction," the subcommissioner replied.

"If you had not been the narrator, Sir Humphrey," his chief observed, "I should have gone even further—I should have called it incredible."

Recounts Brandt's Background.

"Of course," Col. Matterson pointed out, "what happened, Sir Humphrey, as I dare say you have decided for yourself, is easy enough to grasp in its broad details. This fellow Brandt, although he made a very presentable appearance, was in with a queer crowd. We have had his name brought before us half a dozen times—for instance, in connection with baccarat club raids—and, although he has never absolutely found trouble, he has had one or two narrow escapes. He was just the man who might have had friends and sympathizers among the criminal classes."

"I do not believe, Sir Humphrey declared, "that the men who got hold of me—the leaders at any rate—belonged to the criminal classes at all. That is why I think you ought to be able to get hold of them without much difficulty. I know an educated voice when I hear it and I could swear that the man who appeared to be their leader was public school and Oxford. What puzzles me, when I allow myself to think of it at all, is where they got their detail. Everything was horribly accurate."

"They must have got hold of a big house, too," the chief commissioner pointed out. "You don't happen to know Norfolk well geographically, Sir Humphrey?"

Unfamiliar With Roads.

"Unfortunately I don't," the latter regretted. "Keynsham Hall, as you will see by the map, is not far from Kakenham. When we left in the car, which was hired by telephone—your men will find out all about that, of course—we seemed to be going in the right direction and that's all I can say about it."

"Was it a clear night?" Col. Matterson inquired.

"There was a gale of wind blowing and the rain started before we had gone a mile," Sir Humphrey replied. "I was pleasantly tired—Keynsham never overworks his guns but we certainly had had a long day—so I buttoned up my coat, put my feet up on the opposite seat, leaned back and dozed. I had the impression that it was a large house to which I was taken, but I was blindfolded when I arrived at it and blindfolded when I left."

"How long do you think you had been in the car?"

"Roughly, I should say about three-quarters of an hour."

"After you got away," the subcommissioner continued, "how did they deal with you? Did you remain blindfolded?"

Blindfold Removed.

"They removed my bandage," Rossiter answered, "just after we had passed through Royston, and from Royston to Barnet—where they bundled me out into the road about 100 yards away from a taxi-cabstand—I sat with a revolver jabbed into my ribs and the arm of a very strong man through mine. They chose a quiet corner for getting rid of me. The bags and gun cases were taken out first, then they hustled me onto the path, and the car was gone like a flash."

"Proof, if any were needed," Matterson meditated, "that the chauffeur was on the job anyway. Did you try to see the number?"

"I did, but it was one of those temporary plates. I happened to notice that because there has been so much fuss about them lately. There was another thing that struck me, too. The car, to all appearances, was like a sort of limousine taxicab, but it must have had a wonderful engine. It went off at something like 70 miles and hour."

"There should be no difficulty about tracing the car," Matterson mused. "Smithers had better start from Keynsham and work from there. There is nothing more you can tell us that is likely to be useful?"

"Not a thing," Sir Humphrey assured them, rising to his feet. "I shall always be within touch if there are any questions you want to ask me. I'll be getting along now, if you don't mind. It has been a pretty long day for me."

"You have told us the most remarkable story I have ever listened to," Gen. Moore confessed, as he walked with his visitor to the door. "I don't want to appear too sanguine, but it seems to me that it should not be at all impossible of solution. We ought to be able to get hold of the men within a week."

Chapter V.

Sir Humphrey and his doctor dined together that evening in Chestow Square. The latter was jubilant at his patient's triumphant recovery, but insisted on a glass of champagne to counteract the fatigues of the first day.

"By the by," he remarked speculatively, "you said something about a shock, but you never told me what it was that brought on the crisis that terrible night. Your physical condition was bad enough, of course, but it was scarcely sufficient to account for your complete breakdown."

"No, I never told you, Standish," he assented. "I do not think I ever shall. I have had to dig the matter up this afternoon for Scotland Yard, but I do not think that I shall ever tell anybody else."

Jests About Wine.

"My dear fellow, not another word," the physician begged. "I just spoke out of the idlest curiosity. At present I am interested in only one matter—how the mischief did you manage to get this wine transported so that it opens up in such perfect condition?"

Sir Humphrey smiled.

"The question of transport has never arisen," he explained. "This little house—every one wonders why I am so fond of it—belonged to my father and my grandfather. The wine was laid down in these cellars."

"I always wondered why you stayed on here when you have an official residence," the doctor remarked.

"The official residence I use as little as possible. You see, I have no official hostess. My sister comes up from the country whenever I require her, but she is a busy woman and I do not worry her too often. Everyone else in the cabinet is a domestic person with wife and family, and except where it is clearly the home secretary's job I let them take on the entertaining."

Sudden Departure.

Parkins entered and made an announcement.

"There is an urgent telephone call for the doctor, Sir Humphrey," he announced. "He is asked to go to Harding House at once."

"You will excuse me, I know, Humphrey," his guest begged. "It is old Lady Harding—one of my best patients. Nothing serious, but she doesn't like it if I keep her waiting. I shan't bother about seeing you for a day or two. I will ask you to report in a week. No, no coffee, thank you, Parkins, I will get along if you'll call me a taxi."

Sir Humphrey strolled into the hall to see his guest off. As he turned away from the closed front door he noticed that there were several strange hats upon the rack.

"Whose are these choice specimens of headgear, Parkins?" he asked, a little puzzled.

"Four gentlemen are waiting to see you in the library, sir," the man confided. "Col. Matterson is one of them, and I fancy that the other gentlemen are from Scotland Yard. They arrived at the same time as the telephone message for Dr. Standish, so I did not announce them."

"Quite right, Parkins," his master approved. "I will go in at once and see what they want."

In the library he found the subcommissioned, Inspector Smithers and two other men, awaiting him. The former was standing upon the hearth rug and advanced to greet his host.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

At the Window Pane.

Pressed close against the pane they stay
When mother has to go away;
Sad little faces wondering why
So often she must say good-by;
Sad, wistful eyes that can not see
Why all such partings have to be.

Oh, there is tragedy no doubt
When mother all alone goes out.
The tears which stain each little cheek
Life's heartache eloquently speak,
And no great actor could portray
Grief's poignancy in such a way.

'Tis only childhood can express
Its love with so much tenderness
And with a glance and glistening tear
Make loneliness so real appear.
Those, sad, sweet faces at the pane
Tell more than mumbled words explain.

Yet when at last the mother nears
Those lovely faces once again
Are pressed against the window pane
To welcome her with eyes aglow
And love which only children show.

Milliners Rescue Hats From Mid-Season Doldrums With Fresh Models That Combine Straw and Fabric

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 24.—When you find two women fingering a hat and murmuring to each other, "Is it straw, do you think? Or is it a fabric?" . . . the answer usually is, "It's both." Meaning it's one of those combinations of straw-and-fabric which make such practical in-between-season hats . . . new looking, but not so season-rushing as all-straw. And not so cold on the midwinter head, either.

There's straw mixed with woolly angora; with pebbly surfaced fabrics and chenille-like ribs; with rough burlap-like weaves and fuzzy finishes; with hair and wool and with material finished like uncut velvet.

Little Trimming.

Because their textures are unusual . . . due to this combination of two materials . . . these hats need little if any extra trimming. Their ribbed, pebbly, woolly surfaces are decorative in themselves.

These straw-fabrics go into hats which can be worn with both your winter and spring coat. Small enough to fit with big fur collars but with new lines to them.

Off-the-Face Types.

Newest, of course, are the off-the-face types, some of them quite extreme for young piquant faces and some not extreme at all and very wearable even by the woman who shies away from face-revealing styles.

One of these latter is the three-quarter off-the-face type with its brim turned up just at the side front. Another is the beret lifted off the face with a wide side drape.

For the younger wearer, there's the fisherman's type, like the turned back sou'wester deep sea fisherman (and the Uneeda Biscuit boy) wear. And bonnet types with cuffs turned back in the front to frame the face as a baby's bonnet does.

Hats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

Smart Turbans.

Turbans are favorite mediums for straw-fabrics. Some are draped with becoming side width. Others are built into halo effects. Still others are tricorne shape in the new Napoleonic manner. And prim little pill boxes are effective in straw-fabrics.

You'll find these new hats less high in the crown than hats have been during the past season. Many crowns are shaped to the contour of the head, covering much of the hair in the back.

Postal Subs Carry Fight To President

500 March in Protest Against "Starvation Wages."

Representing 25,000 such employes throughout the country, they also marched to the Post Office Department and NRA headquarters with their plea.

Last night they gathered in a mass meeting at Langley Junior High School to finish the drawing up of a brief outlining their case, which will be presented to Congress and the President.

It is planned to deliver the brief to the President, Congress and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson today.

The marchers carried banners with such legends: "Millions for subsidies, not a cent for substitutes," and "$6 a week is not enough."

Consideration Promised.

McIntyre promised sympathetic consideration by the President.

"We have come here in desperation," Albert Gottlieb, of New York, president of the National Association of Substitute Postal Employes, told McIntyre.

"When men are committing suicide because they can't go on, something must be done," he added.

Johnson Can't Act.

But she pointed out that Johnson could take no action in regard to Government employes and all that he could do in their behalf would be recommending that their status be changed.

Specific pleas of the substitute employes were that the President order filling of vacancies in the Postoffice Department and restoration of the 15 per cent pay cut.

Flay Sweatshop Conditions.

Leaders declared that postal substitutes were at present working under "sweatshop conditions far below NRA minimums for any industry."

As substitutes, the marchers declared, they are paid at the rate of 53 cents an hour for the actual time they put in. As a result they earn, according to their spokesman, an average wage of between $6 and $7 per week.

Nine Captured In Dope Drive By U. S. Sleuths

"Big Shot" Is Believed Caught in Downtown Raid.

The drive against operations of a wholesale narcotic ring, launched last month when an alleged dope peddler was shot by a Federal agent at Union Station, brought a total of nine persons under arrest in the last 24 hours.

A picked squad of Federal officers and Headquarters detectives invaded a downtown apartment house yesterday and arrested three men and a woman. The same squad, several hours ealier, brought to headquarters five other prisoners, trapped in three consecutive raids.

The alleged leader of a widely operated dope ring was believed among those captured yesterday. Police said he had been sought since December 21.

Ready to Shoot It Out.

Warned that the suspects might resist arrest, the officers, ready to meet shot for shot, entered an apartment yesterday in London Hall, Thirteenth and M streets northwest. There they arrested Alfred L. Maggio, 26, the reputed ring leader; his wife, Mrs. Fannie R. Maggio, 27; Joseph S. Cohen, 30, and James E. Snow, 37.

Narcotic "buys" totaling upward of $600 were made from members of the gang over a period of weeks, police said. A complete opium outfit was confiscated in one of the houses.

Those captured in the first roundups were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday afternoon.

Held Under Bond.

They included Mrs. Lorraine Horner, 32, arrested at her home, 3915 Military road northwest; Mrs. Sophie Perrin, 45, of 1220 N street northwest; Mary Lee, 41, of 937 New York avenue northwest; John Histon, 31, also of the New York avenue address, and John Bates, 21, of the Baltimore Hotel, Twelfth and Q streets northwest. They all posted bonds ranging from $3,000 to $5,000.

The drive was conducted by Federal Agents Maxwell and Boyd Martin and Detective Sergts. C. E. Mansfield and D. H. Jones.

Sampson Ouster "Regrets" Voiced

Virginia Official Declares Woman Wasn't Fired.

Richmond, Jan. 24 (AP).—Expressing regret that friends of Mrs. Emma Speed Sampson feel she was treated unjustly when her resignation from the State board of motion picture censors was asked by Attorney General John R. Saunders, Assistant Attorney General Edwin H. Gibson said today that Col. Saunders "did not consider that Mrs. Sampson was being removed."

"It was merely felt that her term of office was of uncertain duration and that Mrs. John W. Chalkley had been selected as her successor," Maj. Gibson explained.

Meanwhile, the bill designed to abolish the censorship bureau, scheduled to be introduced in the House today by Delegates Hodges and Stephens, was held up until either tomorrow or Friday, Mr. Stephens said.

Window Broken, Clothes Stolen.

Dry Fadeout

First Hard Liquor Sent Into Kent County.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.). A dozen bottles of Scotch whisky, the first legal liquor received here since the passage of the eighteenth amendment, was delivered to a Kent County citizen this week, sent from England via New York.

This county had local option before prohibition. The law permitted an adult to ship into this dry area a gallon of hard liquor a month. Crowds awaited the coming of boats and trains bringing liquor at specified times each month.

Kent County representatives in the Maryland Legislature recently abolished the old law applying to this county, and the sale of fortified beer and wines and hard liquor by licensed drug stores and grocery stores is now permitted. Because of high licenses, however, no proprietor has offered legal liquor for sale, though 3.2 per cent beer is still being dispensed.

Sales Tax Seen Boon to Realty

Virginian Advises Brokers That Is Only Hope of Relief.

Richmond, Jan. 24 (AP).—Real estate tax relief to localities can not be given except through a general sales tax, which the people of Virginia at this time apparently are unwilling to accept, State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett today told a conference of Virginia real estate leaders here.

Morrissett said he personally preferred a Federal manufacturers' excise tax to a sales tax, first, because a Federal tax could be easily collected at the source, and second, that it would be uniform throughout the Nation. Morrissett added:

"Where can the money be found to replace some $27,000,000 now collected by localities in real estate taxes? The only source I know of is a general retail sales tax. Such a tax might net between $8,000,000 and $12,000,000 annually, thus making possible a reduction in realty taxes of nearly 50 per cent."

Man Shot in Head; Had Bought Pistol

He was found in his hotel room soon after he had gone to a nearby hardware store and purchased a revolver.

Police said Thomas was conscious when they reached him.

T. H. Weisenburg Rites Conducted

Rites were held at the Brethren Church at Leetown, with interment at Moun Zion Cemetery, near Kearneysville. The Rev. W. H. Bradley officiated.

Mr. Weisenburg leaves his widow and five children: Mrs. Guy Schwartz, Thomas Weisenburg, Franklin Weisenburg, Lillie Weisenburg, and Annie Weisenburg.

Capital Area Board to Pick Airport Site

Five Locations Inspected by Military Affairs Committee.

Representative McSwain said yesterday his bill calling for a municipal airport here would be revised to give authority for selection of a site to three commissioners, one each from the District, Virginia and Maryland.

He said this decision was reached after members of the House Military Affairs Committee had made an inspection of five airport sites.

The committee delayed inspecting other sites, including Washington Airport, the Hybla Valley tract near Alexandria, and a site northwest of Alexandria. McSwain said these sites would be visited as soon as the committee could be gathered and time permitted.

Yesterday's inspection included visits to sites offered by Fulton R. Gordon at Oxon Hill, Md.; by Dr. W. W. Stewart, between Meadows and Camp Springs, Md.; by Edward H. Young, on the Eastern Branch flats, south of Benning road; the Capitol airport site, offered by Edward R. Stitt, near Bladensburg and Kenilworth, D. C. The day's inspection closed with a visit to the Chillum site, offered by a group headed by former Representative Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota.

Opinions concerning the sites were not expressed by the committee.

Forum Asks Alley Action By Congress

D. C. Civic Chiefs Seek Slum Elimination, Pension Law.

Suffrage, School Aid and Low Rent Legislation Also Advocated.

Elimination of Washington's slums and alley dwellings was urged on Congress by representatives of District civic and welfare organizations yesterday.

The recommendations were voiced at an open forum on District affairs conducted by the Senate District Committee, at which more than 100 persons appeared at invitation of Senator King (Democrat), Utah, committee chairman.

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan, vice presdient of the District Federation of Citizens Associations, presented the recommendation of that organization that slums and alley dwellings be eliminated.

Other Measures Advocated.

Sanford Bates, Federal director of prisons, who represented the Monday Evening Club, also urged enactment of the alley closing bill.

An old age pension law, better school facilities, suffrage for the District, removal of the District budget from control of the Federal Budget Bureau, and revision of the present system of assessing real estate with a view to inducing lower rents, were among other matters urged on the committee.

Enactment of an old age pension was one of the first two recommendations of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Others were enactment of the King bill to regulate practice of law in the District, and codification of the general District laws.

James F. Duhamel, of the Oldest Inhabitants Association, urged an old age pension law with a 68-year age limit.

School Relief Endorsers.

Those who urged betterment of school facilities included a delegation from Benning, headed by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Sheriff, R. J. Heckman and Dr. Charles B. Campbell. They also objected to smoke from a dump in that section, and urged use of the southeast incinerator plant. Later, Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), New York, also objected to the smoke nuisance and suggested an air-pollution inquiry.

Other school advocates included Edgar W. Horad, Charles Young, Parent-Teacher Association; George Emerson, Mrs. Charles H. Blair, G. L. Gammell, Lincoln Park Citizens Association, and Mrs. C. C. Mulaney.

'Intoxicated' Thug Chalks Up Another

Second Laundry Robbed by Bandit.

Washington's "intoxicated" bandit robbed his second laundry in two days yesterday.

Entering the Elite Laundry, at 2827 Fourteenth street northwest, he took $5 from Beatrice Bachrach, an employe. As he was about to leave, Ethel Bast, another employe, entered. The robber got $3 from her, forced his victims into a back room and escaped. Both women said he had been drinking.

Earle Elevator Boy Is Indicted in Theft

The District Grand Jury yesterday indicted William K. Van Kleek, 19-year-old elevator operator in the Earle Building, on a charge of stealing bonds valued at $1,000 from the office of John S. Barker in that building.

Grand jury witnesses said the young man had a pass key that enabled him to enter offices in the building. He was arrested last week after numerous complaints regarding the pilfering of articles from various offices had been made.

Citizens at First Senate Open Forum

Woman Active In War Buried

Mrs. John W. Bowman, 45, Wife of Orchardist, Served Overseas.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.). Funeral rites were conducted from Hopewell Meeting House near here today for Mrs. Virginia Griest Bowman, 45, wife of John W. Bowman, prominent Frederick County orchardist.

Mrs. Bowman served in religious and reconstruction work among the American forces in France during the war.

She was a native of Warren County, a daughter of the late Frank and Ella Preston Griest. Surviving are her husband; two children, Lincoln Griest Bowman and Miss Margaret Gardner Bowman, and one brother, Edward Griest, of Germantown, Pa.

Century-Old Home In Valley Burns

Antique Furnishings Lost; Damage $5,000.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.). Fire yesterday destroyed the Bayard homestead, in the Briery Branch section of Rockingham County. The loss was estimated at $5,000.

The ten-room log dwelling was built more than 100 years ago. The house had been occupied by the Bayard family for 70 years.

Sparks from the kitchen chimney ignited the side of the building, the family said. Charles Bayard and his sister, Miss Nettie Bayard, saved some personal effects, but none of the antiques. Mr. and Mrs. Early Rexrode, who also lived in the house, lost practically all of their property.

2 Armed Bandits Rob Hotel Clerk of $27

Two armed men early yesterday entered the Gordon Hotel, 916 Sixteenth street northwest, and robbed the night clerk, Vivian Lane, of $27. Lane said the bandits were young and well dressed. They walked to the street after warning him not to move.

D. C. Old Age Pension Bars Alley Report

Dwelling Measure Will Not Be Brought Up for Week.

Patman Urges Children Be Required to Aid Indigent Parents.

A controversy over the minimum age provision of the Capper-Norton old-age pension bill for the District yesterday delayed a favorable report by the House District Committee and caused postponement of action on the alley dwelling measure for another week.

All members of the committee present appeared in favor of the old-age pension bill, but the majority voted to raise the minimum age requirement from 60 to 65 years.

The committee is also considering inserting a provision which would eliminate indigents who have children able to support them despite the fact that the District has no law which makes children legally responsible to support their parents.

Seeks Check on Funds.

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, insisted that the Norton bill would not prevent persons over 65 who have children able to support them from obtaining the $9-a-week pension.

An unsuccessful fight to retain the 60-year age minimum in the bill was made by Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, and Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), Pennsylvania, newly appointed to the District Committee.

An impassioned plea for the lower age limit was made by Representative Monaghan (Democrat), of Montana, author of a National old-age pension bill. He asserted that eventually the country would have to provide for a 50-year minimum.

Leifur Magnusson, chairman of the Citizens Committee on Old Age Security for the District, estimated on the basis of a survey by his organization that approximately 1,000 persons above 65 years of age would apply for aid under the District pension plan.

The 1930 census, he said, tabulated about 27,000 persons above 65 in Washington.

The representation of the Federation of Citizens Association was questioned by Chairman Norton after Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, vice president, had reported that the federation favored an age limit of 68 but was willing to compromise on 65.

Mrs. Norton asked how many of the half-million residents of Washington the federation represented. Mrs. Sullivan replied that it and its affiliated organizations had about 40,000 members. The chairman observed that the membership was therefore less than 10 per cent of the population.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Talk On Old-Age Pensions

Virginia Legal Staff Changes Sought in Bill

Would Abolish Special State Counsel; Hopewell Court Hearing Today.

Richmond, Jan. 24 (AP).—The Senate courts of justice committee today favorably reported a series of bills reorganizing the attorney general's office and abolishing special counsel for State departments, agencies and institutions.

Meanwhile a quick move in the Senate to abolish the corporation court in Hopewell—a political storm center two years ago—caught the General Assembly off its guard, and the courts of justice committee, seeking time to consider the move, set the abolition bill for a public hearing at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

In the House, Delegates McMurran, of Portsmouth, and Scott, of Roanoke, introduced a bill calling for the reapportionment of House of Delegates membership through redistricting, which would give urban districts increased representation.

Liquor Control Studied.

Meanwhile senators expressed anxiety when it was suggested that unless quick action is taken on the congressional redistricting bill now before a Senate committee, another at-large race for Congress in the Democratic primary is probable.

The House finance committee wrestled with the liquor control law, with the intention of reporting the bill tonight.

The attorney general bills were offered by Senator T. Russell Cather, of Winchester. They provide the attorney general shall have eight assistants. The special counsel would be discontinued, and all legal work of all departments, agencies and institutions would be cleared through the attorney general's office. One exception was made providing for special counsel for specific cases when conditions make it impossible for it to be handled by the staff.

Hopewell Court Bill Offered.

The Hopewell court bill was introduced by Senator W. O. Rogers, who told the committee that business interests of Hopewell demanded that the court be abolished. His bill provided that the work of the court be taken over by the circuit court.

Judge Thomas B. Robertson, who presides over the court, is up for reelection at this term of the Legislature. A long controversy on "competency" raged around Judge Robertson during the 1932 session, and an effort was made to remove him from the bench.

Lutherans Elect Dr. J. J. Scherer

Arthur P. Black, of Washington, appealed for support of various inner organizations of the church. He said brotherhood of the church faced one of its most challenging programs, and described the Luther League as one of the most potent forces within the church.

The afternoon session today was featured by reports on auxiliary activities. Vesper services tonight were led by the Rev. A. W. Ballentine.

Woman Said Spouse Fired Fatal Bullet.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—E. Russell Koons, 34, awaiting action of the February grand jury for fatally shooting his wife, Catherine, last January 4, was today released in $10,000 bail by Judge Frank G. Wagaman.

Kentuckian Irked by Removal Of Verse by "Native Son" Poet

Perhaps the Fine Arts Commission, which has the final say on what constitutes beauty and symmetry in the National Capital, doesn't care for elegies.

Anyway, Representative Virgil Chapman, of Paris, Ky., is somewhat aroused after discovering that tablets with inscriptions from the famed elegy, "The Bivouac of the Dead," have been removed from Arlington Cemetery.

He had just attempted to remedy the matter by introducing a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to replace the tablets without benefit of advice from the Fine Arts Commission.

Chapman, while appreciative of poetry, is not so much interested in the poetic side of the issue as in the fact that the author of "The Bivouac of the Dead", is the pride of Kentucky and the Sixth Congressional District, which he represents. He was Theodore O'Hara.

The metal tablets, formerly stationed at road and walk intersections, were removed several years ago by the Fine Arts Commission because they did not conform with the cemetery's architectural plan. Chapman said the fact has just been called to his attention.

Virginia House Group Denies Hotels Liquor

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 24.—Liquor privileges should be denied to hotels and restaurants, the House finance committee ruled today.

While a favorable report remained to be formally recommended, the committee virtually decided to support the Hall bill, calling for restriction of liquor sales to State-operated dispensaries. Hotels and restaurants would be permitted only to serve beer and wines of small alcoholic content.

A surprise came with rejection of an amendment backed by Gov. Peery, under which the chairman of the alcoholic beverage control board would have exclusive authority to appoint employes.

Little Opposition Voiced.

A voice vote decided the hotel and restaurant issue. Only 2 or 3 of the 18 committee members voted against a blanket motion by Delegate W. N. Neff, Abingdon, who proposed rejection at one stroke of all amendments intended to permit sales by the drink in hotels and restaurants.

Minority members probably will renew in floor debate arguments that hotels and restaurants in Washington and neighboring States will obtain the bulk of normal Virginia tourist business unless the dispensary program is modified.

Delegate W. Stuart Moffett, Staunton, led a successful fight for an amendment under which the liquor board could operate distilleries. He said the State highway department had obtained price concessions by purchasing rock crushing equipment and contended the liquor board would be in a better position to bargain with manufacturers if able to make its own whisky.

Proposals to limit the board's power to revoke wine and beer licenses were voted down.

Pension Bill Advanced.

Senator Aubrey Weaver, Front Royal, advanced in the Senate a measure calling for payment of pensions to widows who married Confederate veterans prior to 1910, instead of 1900. He reported the bill would not involve enlarged outlays by the State because many unmarried veterans have died in the past two years.

Delegate R. F. McMurran, Portsmouth, advanced a proposal to reapportion House membership. The bill would give one delegate to the district of Louisa and Fluvanna Counties, while one delegate would be shared by Rappahannock, Culpeper and Madison Counties.

2 Commissioners For Juries Named

Lists Will Be Drawn for 3 Roanoke Courts.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—D. K. Umberger and W. L. Becker have been appointed jury commissioners in the three Roanoke courts of record to prepare jury lists for the year.

Judge J. L. Almond, jr., said he and Judge Beverley Berkeley, of law and chancery court, and Judge T. L. Keister, of circuit court, have agreed the same commissioners may serve in all three courts, thus eliminating possibility of duplication of names.

Last year Judge John M. Hart appointed separate jury commissioners, but his list was set aside when Judge Almond succeeded him as hustings judge.

Gathright Stays As Comptroller

He already was serving in that post, having been named by Gov. John Garland Pollard to complete the term of E. R. Combs, recently named district RFC director.

Mr. Gathright's reappointment leaves unfilled only two major appointive offices under the Peery administration. They are commissioner of fisheries and commissioner of agriculture. The governor said today he is not yet prepared to announce the appointments.

Mr. Peery announced 10 appointments immediately after his inauguration a week ago. Today's appointment of Mr. Gathright was the eleventh.

Considerable competition exists for the two remaining offices. O. A. Bloxom, of Newport News, is a candidate for the fisheries post now held by Richard Armstrong, of Hampton. A half dozen or more candidates seek the agriculture post held by George W. Koiner, who is the oldest department head in point of service.

Virginia Lapse May Put House Race at Large

Smith, Alexandria, Will Encounter Severe Opposition.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Jan. 24.—All candidates for the House of Representatives in elections next fall may have to run at large because of failure to include an emergency clause in a Congressional redistricting bill pending in the Legislature, it was reported today.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, declared the measure would not become effective until June 20, without an emergency provision, and that date would be too late for the required 60-day notice of candidacy prior to the August primary.

He said a four-fifth vote, necessary to make the bill effective on passage, could not be obtained.

There was speculation over the bill's effect on the political future of Representative Howard W. Smith, Alexandria. It was said his chances of reelection would be less in a State-wide than in a district election.

Politicians said Smith would lose support in distant districts because his brother, State Senator W. Worth Smith, jr., Louisa, ran against George C. Peery, for governor.

Favorable reports on five bills to place all State lawyers under the attorney general were voted today by the Senate courts of justice committee on recommendation of Senator T. Russell Cather, Winchester.

The measures, Cather argued, would enable substantial salary economies by reducing the number of full-time attorneys. The attorney general would have eight instead of two assistants, but lawyers in separate departments would be eliminated.

Cather said the plan would prevent confusion. In the past, attorneys for different departments have advanced conflicting opinions on the same issue.

No Kiss

But Annapolis Man's Fined, Accused of Trying.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Walter H. Hart, Annapolis realty operator, was fined $25 by Police Magistrate Thomas G. Basil today on an assault and battery charge preferred by Mrs. J. Lundie Smith, who charged Hart put his arm around her and attempted to kiss her last July 12.

Hart declared the charge false and through Attorney Richard B. Tippett filed notice of appeal to the circuit court. Mrs. Smith, once a tenant in an apartment building owned by Hart, and acting as an agent for him in renting apartments, testified she accompanied Hart to a vacant apartment in connection with some repair work, and that when she temporarily turned from him he embraced her.

Hart asserted he had never been alone with Mrs. Smith under any circumstances and added that only a week ago he had a disagreement with her over some rent.

Sharing Rum Levy By Cities Asked

Lynchburg Wants Division; Pastors Rap Betting.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—The city council has adopted a resolution asking representatives in the Legislature to seek such provision in the State dispensary plan, if such be enacted, that Virginia cities will get 50 per cent of the proceeds from the sale of liquors. The council contends each city should be paid thus for policing where liquors are sold.

The ministerial union here has memorialized the General Assembly, urging that a bill providing for legalizing of pari-mutuel betting in Virginia be defeated. Betting at races would "tend to the economic, moral and spiritual detriment of the people," a resolution adopted by the ministers declared.

The union also has asked the city council to take steps to end the operation of slot machines here.

Mrs. Georgia Curtis.

Funeral services were conducted today for Mrs. Georgia Curtis, 70, wife of Beverley Curtis, who died yesterday at her home in Richardsville, Culpeper County.

Mrs. Curtis is survived by a sister, Mrs. E. J. Embrey, of this city.

Pioneer Priest To Be Honored

Church in St. Marys Will Memorialize Colonial Pastor in Plan.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—The Rev. Herbert Parker, S. J. rector of Holy Face R. C. Church at Great Mills, is perfecting plans for a memorial church to the Rev. Andrew White, S. J., pioneer Missionary priest who labored among the Indians and early Maryland Colonists.

A drive will be made in Roman Catholic Churches over the country to raise $50,000 needed for the church, to be located seven miles from St. Mary's City, where Father White and his missionaries landed.

The Pilgrims of St. Marys, a society with branches in Baltimore and Washington, will solicit funds.

At the shrine erected to Father White and his missionaries on the banks of St. John's creek near St. Marys City, a field mass, in which Jesuit societies from over the country will participate, will be held May 8 in honor of the priest and as a part of the Maryland Tercentenary celebration. This outdoor alter was erected in 1932.

Londos Here To Tackle Zarynoff

Shikat Meets Manich in Semifinal Tonight at Auditorium.

TIME was when Jimmy Londos was the only rassle champ recognized in this neck of the woods, and the cash customers saw in the Gorgeous Greek all that was desired in a sports kingpin. Then Promoter Joe Turner decided upon a new deal and Jim Browning, whose title claims have been O. K.'d in practically all of the States who have not nominated Londos or Ed Don George for the honor, was brought here for a series of bouts.

Browning, a big, aggressive fellow with a spectacular airplane leg-scissors, made local addicts almost forget Londos, especially since the Greek has not shown here for eight months. There have been any number of debates as to which of these claimants is the better and, with the two always managing to have engagements elsewhere when a showdown meeting was proposed, there appeared to be no way that the question could be definitely settled.

Londos Back Again.

Londos comes back to the Auditorium tonight, though, and it so happens that he meets Count George Zarynoff, the naked-browed Ukranian title holder, in the feature—the grappler who was Browning's foe in his last appearance here four shows back. It took Browning 52 minutes to dispose of the Count, and fans are figuring on getting a line on the Browning-Londos argument on a comparative score basis. So it is up to Londos to down Zarynoff in less time or to lose his standing in the community.

Londos may make short work of the titled Ukranian, but the fans do not expect him to, for Zarynoff is strong, fast, clever and slippery and is a better physical match for Londos than he was for Browning. But whether or not Londos gets a better-than-52-minute verdict, he is in for quite a battle and a capacity crowd is expected to be on hand to see the fun.

Shikat Meets Manich.

Dick Shikat, from whom Londos won his title claim, will appear in the semifinal against George Manich in what should prove to be an interesting set-to, while three better than ordinary preliminaries are listed. In the main one, Jim Clinstock and Vanka Zelesniak, two of the cave man type of maulers and brawlers will do their stuff, while the other fracases pit Vic Christy against Ernie Dusek in Christy's biggest test here and Paul Boesch against shoeless Scotty McDougall.

Women will be admitted at half price provided they present a pay-my escort along with their cash. The grunting starts at the usual 8:30 time.

Iowa Students, 'Lured' Away, Arrive on Coast

Los Angeles, Jan. 24 (AP).—Bud Fenning and Duane Swanson, freshman athletes from the University of Iowa, arrived here today seeking to enroll at the University of Southern California.

The two basket ball stars, who stirred up considerable discussion between Rollie Williams, Iowa cage coach, and Trojan athletic authorities, hitch-hiked here from Iowa City.

Duck Stamp Bill Wins Conference's Backing

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—The American game conference today indorsed by resolution the so-called duck stamp bill now under consideration in Congress.

The measure provides that hunters of migratory water fowl shall each pay $1 for a stamp to be placed on their State hunting license. The proceeds would be used in the purchase, improvement and protection of breeding grounds and refuges and for other essential measures to perpetuate water fowl.

Wealthy Asked to Aid Germany in Olympics

Berlin, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Wealthy Germans today were asked by Johannes Runge, head trainer of the Reichwehr athletes, to assume a "sports godfathership" to insure Germany's success in the 1936 Olympics.

"Many of Germany's most promising athletes are too poor to buy the proper food for training," Runge said, "and those with wealth should remedy this condition."

Harrisonburg Quintet Will Oppose Staunton

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Two old rivals—both undefeated—will clash at Staunton Friday night, when Harrisonburg High battles Robert E. Lee High. Each quintet has been victorious in eight games.

Harrisonburg's latest triumph was a 32-to-23 victory over Handley High at Winchester. Shomo, star forward, scored 19 points for the Blue Streaks.

Hockey Game Benefit Is Planned for Bailey

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—The board of governors of the National Hockey League today voted to stage a benefit hockey game between the Toronto Maple Leafs and an all-star team selected from among the other clubs in the circuit in Toronto at a date to be selected, all the proceeds to go to Irvin (Ace) Bailey, injured Toronto player.

Bailey suffered a skull fracture in a game at Boston December 12 which will keep him out of hockey for at least two years and perhaps for life.

The players for the all-star team—two from each club—will be selected by the league's board of control.

The Boston club held a benefit for Bailey soon after his injury, at which over $6,000 was realized.

2 D. C. Golfers Eliminated In Florida

Jameson Beaten, 3 and 1, Bean Bows by 8 and 7 at Coral Gables.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—E. C. Jameson, Washington, D. C., southpaw golfer, was defeated in the first round of match play in the annual Miami Biltmore invitation golf tournament here today. He bowed to Bill Wilkenson, of Indianapolis, comedalist, 3 and 1.

E. H. Bean, also of Washington, was eliminated, falling before Arnold Minkley, of Cleveland, 8 and 7.

Jameson played well for twelve holes, at which point he was one up, but he faltered considerably thereafter due to erratic work around the greens. He dropped four of the last five holes.

Squares Match Twice.

The four players were all even at the turn after Wilkenson won the second and sixth holes and Jameson retaliated to square the match twice with wins on the fifth and seventh. Jameson forged to the front with a par 3 on the twelfth, but Wilkenson spurted to even matters with a par 4 on the thirteenth. Wilkenson added the fourteenth with a par 4 and the fifteenth with a birdie 3 to become 2 up. After halving the next hole, Wilkenson ended the match with a 5, one over par, on the seventeenth. Jameson's approach shot landed over the green on the latter hole.

The cards:

Jameson—Out...	5	4	5	4	5	5	3	4	4	—39
Wilkenson—Out.	5	3	5	4	6	4	4	4	4	—39
Jameson—In.....	5	4	3	5	4	5				—56
Wilkenson—In.....	5	4	4	4	3	4				—55

Curtis Bryan, of Jacksonville, Fla., who tied Wilkenson for the medal, disposed of Paul Leviton, of New York, by 4 and 2.

O'Brien to Leave Navy Shortly for New Job

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—John (One-Play) O'Brien, end and assistant line coach of the Navy football squad for the last two years, who has been appointed athletic director and head football coach at St. Edward's College, Austin, Tex., said today he would leave Annapolis this week-end to assume his new post. O'Brien will be returning to his native State.

O'Brien, who played end on Notre Dame during the seasons of 1928 to 1930, inclusive, gained the nickname of "One-Play" through his ability to snare long passes on scoring plays. For the last two years he has been one of the right-hand men of Edgar E. (Rip) Miller, head mentor of Navy gridders. He was an assistant in the physical training department at the Naval Academy and was assistant track coach.

The departure of O'Brien will leave only Miller of the trio of former Notre Dame stars who have been developing the Middie gridders for the last three years. Christy Flannagan, third of the group, has returned to his home in Texas to engage in business with his father.

Loughran, Confident, Entrains for Florida

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 24 (AP).—Primo Carnera, world's heavyweight boxing champion who will defend his title against Tommy Loughran at Miami February 22, today arrived in Havana by airplane for a two-day vacation. He said he would fly back to Miami tomorrow.

Oar Classic Scheduled June 16

Poughkeepsie Regatta Restored With Full Program Listed.

California, Washington Expected to Represent West Coast.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP).—Triumphantly riding the rising tide of returning prosperity, the Poughkeepsie regatta will swing back into life again on June 16 after an absence of a year from the intercollegiate sports program.

Keeping to a promise they made last year when they regretfully canceled the 1933 races, the stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association today unanimously voted to renew the classic and expressed the hope and belief that the usual representation would be on hand to man the sweeps. The full program of 4-mile varsity, 3-mile junior varsity and 2-mile freshman races will be held.

The decision restores to Eastern rowing fans one of the oldest and most colorful of all intercollegiate rivalries, inaugurated in 1895 and renewed every year since, except for the World War period, until last summer.

California Won in '32.

California won the last varsity race, then went on to capture Olympic laurels at Los Angeles, repeating the achievement of four years before.

Maxwell Stevenson, chairman of the board, said he believed both California and Washington, which won in 1923, 1924 and 1926, would be back again next June. Massachusetts Tech and Wisconsin also will be asked to join the five members of the association, Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, Pennsylvania and Navy.

Stevenson said invitations also would be sent to Princeton, which has never rowed in the regatta; Marietta (Ohio) College, and even little Manhattan if it continues the rowing program undertaken two years ago.

Yale vs. Harvard.

Yale and Harvard have their own private quarrel to settle at New London a week after Poughkeepsie. They have not competed in the regatta since 1897.

Supplementing the official statement, which said that the "stewards are proceeding in the belief that all member colleges will be represented," Stevenson expressed the belief that if there was any curtailment it would only be in the minor races.

Representation in the junior varsity and freshman events never has been as complete as in the varsity contest, only six junior varsity crews competing in 1932 and seven freshman eights, against nine in the "big" race.

Scholl's to Entertain Rider College Tossers

Tomorrow night the Sholls will be out to win their seventieth straight game, when they meet the Rockville A. C. on its home floor, the Boys Club gym.

The Boys Club varsity, which plays preliminary battles to the Cafemen's tussles, will meet the Hyattsville Company F five tomorrow night and the Petersburg (Va.) A. & P. quintet Sunday.

Boys Club, Merrick Matmen Meet Tonight

Washington Boys Club wrestlers will open their season tonight in a match with the Merrick Boys Club grapplers on the former's mat. The first bout will start at 8:15 o'clock. Charley Reynolds has been working diligently with the Washington youngsters and is confident that the team will keep the bacon at home. Jim McNamara will referee the bouts, which will be judged by Bucky Green, Jimmy Sullivan and Joe Arnoff.

The complete program follows:

50-pounds—Billy Edwards (W.), vs. Jimmy Justic (M.); 105-pounds—Bernard Perry (W.), vs. Paul Babbington (M.); 115-pounds—Dens de Angelis (W.), vs. Charles Lassise (M.); 120-pounds—Jimmy Young (M.), vs. Tom de Angelis (W.); 120-pounds—John Waldron (M.), vs. Steve Mamakois (W.); 130-pounds—George Abrams (W.), vs. Mike Morton (M.).

Professors Forced to Pass Stars or Lose Jobs, Charge

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—A lashing indictment against State universities in the United States was handed out today by Prof. O. F. W. Ellis, who recently was on the staff of Western Reserve University, Ohio.

Dr. Ellis told newspapermen it "is as much as a professor's job is worth to pluck a student in many of the State universities."

Students, he said, were passed on the "escalator system"—as they came up they were approved and passed. Political influence and interference would bear down on a professor with temerity enough to pluck a student, he said, using the word "pluck" to mean "flunk."

"A professor doesn't dare pluck a football or basket ball player," Ellis said in his denunciation.

He told of an incident in an Ohio State university where a principal suspended a football star for cheating. The outcome was, he said, that the principal was forced to resign and the player was reinstated.

"The professors, themselves intelligent and qualified men, simply view the situation philosophically and resign themselves to it, that is, if they wish to keep their posts," Dr. Ellis said.

Florida Racing Scene Shifts To Hialeah

45-Day Meeting to Open Today With $2,500 Inaugural Feature.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—Thoroughbred racing on the winter tracks will shift into high tomorrow when 16 speedy sprinters match strides in the $2,500 inaugural handicap at the opening of Hialeah Park's 45-day meeting.

For the opening 6-furlong feature, Evergold from the Nash brother's Shandon farm, of Chicago, is expected to rule the 2-to-1 choice. S. W. Labrot's Springsteel has been assigned the top weight of 124 pounds, but with such a heavy package in the saddle the son of Sir Greysteel is given no better than an 8-to-1 chance. Evergold will carry 119 pounds.

Also rated high are the Arden Farms' Quel Jeu, Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Easy Come, Mrs. J. Grossman's Merrily On and Morton L. Schwartz's Clarify.

The other entries include: J. E. Smallman's Canadian-owned Fredrick and Feudal Lord, Jim Fitzsimmons' Repaid, J. P. Ebelhardt's Gift of Roses, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Curacao, Mrs. Edward McCuan's Sobieha, J. E. Widener's The Pelican, W. T. Waggoner's Open Range, Mrs. William Ziegler, jr.'s Aunt Flor and the Jersey Stable's Character.

3 Infield Jobs Open on Yanks

New York, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The New York Yankees may take the field this season with a completely revised infield, according to indications in the club's 1934 roster, issued today.

Don Heffner from Baltimore, one of the few newcomers on the list of 31 players, will fight it out for second base with veteran Tony Lazzeri.

Lyn Lary, utility man of last season, and Jack Salzgaver, who was recalled from Newark, will battle for third base vacated by Joey Sewell. The latter is a Yankee coach.

Bob Rolfe is back from Newark and is expected to give Frank Crosetti a tussle for the shortstop job. Lou Gehrig will be back at first.

The Yanks still are trying to obtain another starting pitcher. The mound staff proved unexpectedly weak last year, and the roster shows that little has been done to bolster it. Allen, Gomez, Ruffing, Van Atta and Devens are expected to form the neucleus of the staff.

O'Neill Stars' Mother Is Dead at Age of 83

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Mary O'Neill, 83, who gave a family of sons to the baseball diamond, died today at her home a short distance from Minooka, where Mike, Pat, John, Jimmy and Steve O'Neill started their baseball careers on sand lots.

Mike and John, for years formed a battery for one of the St. Louis teams. Steve was a catcher for Cleveland and the New York Yankees and now resides in Cleveland. Jimmy played with Washington. Steve is manager of Toledo in the American Association.

About the Telling of All

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (Spl.).—There has been a rash of athletic literature recently in which various parties have volunteered to tell all. I have read a great many of these effusions and find them mildly entertaining but hardly informative. A national magazine this week offers "The Truth at Last," an article sponsored, and possibly even prepared, by Helen Jacobs, the new queen of tennis, in which we are supposed to get the low down on the long-standing feud between the two Helens.

Here is a subject in which I have been vitally interested for many months and I will admit that I fingered the folio feverishly and buried my nose in the printed page seeking for the light. I can not say that I found much. Maybe I expected too much. I thought that Miss Jacobs might say that Mrs. Moody is a nasty little so-and-so, and she will chase her right off the courts when they next meet. That would be my idea of literature.

Instead of which, Miss Jacobs deposes that Le Belle Moody is a sweet and estimable young lady, of great personal beauty and culture and charm and a fine tennis player. I have known this for a great many years. She tells how she strove to copy Mrs. Moody's backhand and her sangfroid on the tennis courts, how Mrs. Moody never blackballed her from any sorority as has been current gossip, and how once when she collapsed in the dressing room in some foreign championship, Mrs. Moody dabbed her temples with eau de cologne (or was it eau de vie?) and told her when she opened her eyes that she must not take her tennis so seriously.

The yarn is full of such delicate and slightly dull gossipy morsels. And at the end Miss J. touches upon the now most famous tennis match in history and opines that if Helen had a pain in her leg or her spine she had a perfect right to stop playing and walk off the court as long as she left the victory with Miss Jacobs, which after all, she did.

Mons. Leon See, the deposed manager of Primo Carnera, is engaged in exposing boxing and the Carnera build-up in a worthy and estimable afternoon contemporary in our town, but to date has written nothing to cause my hair to stand on end. Maybe he is saving it for the later chapters, but I doubt it, because that is not considered good journalism. If you have anything really hot to give the customers it is considered excellent literary taste (and good for circulation, too) to give them a couple of good jolts right at the start to set them talking and keep them coming back for more. If anything, the rascal is destroying some of my fondest illusions. I always thought the Bombo Chevalier (no relation to Maurice) versus Carnera match on the West Coast was a fake and so did the California commissioners who branded it as such. Now Leon comes out and says it was on the square.

Perhaps when Leon gets his ex-oaf into the United States and begins his recital of the early tours he made through the rural and urban sections of the North, East, South and West, the copy will get a little saltier. In his preamble, Leon gave a Gallic shrug of his shoulders in type, nearly knocking the column rules out of alignment in which he said that if he must needs die at the hands of villains for this ruthless exposure, then come stark and terrible death. Come, come, Leon, if death were the penalty for writing slightly tiresome pieces, none of us would be alive today.

I can not say that I have much faith in these athletes and sportsmen who tell all. I never found one who would really get the whistle between his teeth and exact a good, shrill squeal from it.

Most of them have nothing to say and if they have they're afraid to say it. Some five or six years ago, I was taxicab riding Jimmy Johnston, now Garden matchmaker, but then not yet risen to such a position of eminence. We fell to talking and James said this, that and the other thing about the boxing racket. "You wouldn't put that in writing, would you, mister?" I said to James. "Sure I would," he said, "why not?"

Well, here was a series for your whiskers. I signed Jimmy up for seven articles, advertised it, ballyhooed it. James J. Johnston tells all. What a build-up. The boxing world trembled awaiting the first edition of our paper at the door to the pressroom and thumbing with feverish fingers to the fatal page.

My friends, it was awful. I do not mean the slaughter, but the series. I never read a worse one and I ought to know because I wrote it. When the time came, Jimmy spurned the whistle like Caesar turning aside the crown, picked up a lyre instead and twanged it sweetly. I could have killed him. It was one terrible bust, amigos, and so, I am afraid are all the rest of these old athletes' tales. Nobody ever really tells all. They can't without tattling a little on themselves.

Water Poloists Open Series Friday

THE first of a series of water polo games to be held by the District Water Polo League finds the Washington Canoe Club facing the Shoreham Swimming Club's team at the Shoreham next Friday. In the Shoreham team, the District champions will be facing a strong line-up, including Robert Varela, former Syracuse U. star; David Tipp, formerly of Penn; David Roadley and Thornton Burns.

During intermission, Robert Knight, Marie Duval and Johnny Marshall will give exhibitions of diving. The game is open to the public with no admission charge.

The final schedule for water polo, as approved by the District A. A. U. and the Water Polo Association, is as follows: Ambassador vs. Washington Canoe Club, January 26; Ambassador vs. Shoreham, February 2; Washington Canoe Club vs. Shoreham, February 2; Ambassador vs. Baltimore Y., February 16; Washington Canoe Club vs. Baltimore Y., February 23; Shoreham vs. Baltimore Y., March 2.

All games will be played in the Shoreham Hotel's Venetian Pool.

Eight events will make up the program for the meet between the Boys Club team of the Shoreham and the Y. M. C. A. Junior team to be held in the Venetian Pool January 27.

As many out-of-town entries as possible are being sought for the National Junior 220-yard free style championship race to be swum at the Shoreham February 9. Entry blanks to practically every city in the East have been mailed out, but responses have not begun to come in as yet. The Penn A. C. team, which captured honors twice this season from the Shoreham Girls team, has promised to compete.

The District A. A. U. high board diving championship for women will be a part of the same meet.

Kenney Runner-up In 3-Cushion Play

Beats McCourt, 50-34, in Play-Off for Second.

Philadelphia, Jan. 24 (AP).—Len Kenney, seeded star from Chicago today won the runner-up place in the National three-cushion billiard championships and a qualifying post in the world's title play by downing Charles McCourt, Northern sectional crownholder, 50 to 34, in 59 innings.

With Kinrey Matsuyama, Japanese cue ace from New York, the National title winner by virtue of his defeat of Alfred De Oro, sr., Cuban veteran, last night, Kenney took second honors by trouncing the Clevelander in the play-off which wound up the 12-day long tourney.

Kenney took the lead in the eleventh inning by a 6-5 count. He gradually added to his total and by the time the fiftieth frame passed, he had a 10-point edge, which he increased in the next nine trips to the table.

Final Action Expected Shortly

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The old football regime at Yale is through.

The new coaching set-up will represent a compromise with that section of the alumni which demands outside big-time coaching. But a Yale man will be head coach and will be active in that capacity. A staff of three or four recognized coaches wil be his aids in a close-knit cooperative staff.

Root May Return.

Reggie Root, head coach last year, probably will return as head freshman coach, the position he held formerly. Most of his varsity coaching staff will be replaced.

That, unofficially, but based on reliable reports, was the situation as Yale athletic offices there was neither denial nor confirmation. It was indicated a final decision probably would be announced by early next weey unless present plans fall through.

To Have Freer Rein.

This staff of three or four will have a freer rein than the average staff of assistants. They will work in close cooperation with the head coach and have an equal voice in determining the manner in which the team is to be handled. It is understood all will be advocates of the same system of play so that friction on that score will not be a factor.

Names of the proposed head coach and his aids are being guarded closely by Malcolm Farmer, athletic director, and his alumni advisory committee.

Jones, it was understood, was slated for the job definitely last week, but a hitch occurred and the committee started again to line up a staff it hopes can restore to Yale the football prestige it once enjoyed.

Anxious to Return.

Root, who held the head coach's job one year and lost four major games, has been sidetracked in the committee's considerations, but probably will be offered his old job as freshman coach, held last year by Mal Stevens, former head coach. Root, it is understood, is anxious to have the freshman post again.

Root's assistants last year were Adam Walsh, Paul A. (Bucky) O'Connor, Stewart P. Scott, Charles A. Comerford, Arthur E. Palmer and Raymond (Ducky) Pond. Walsh and O'Connor are former Notre Dame stars, the others are Yale men. It is believed most of them, possibly all, will be dropped.

Plans Made to Revive Old Three-Eye Loop

Davenport, Iowa, Jan. 24 (AP).—The financially ailing Mississippi Valley Baseball League gave up the ghost today, and in its place the historic Three-Eye League was revived. The new Three-Eye League will be formed from cities which at one time or another belonged to one of the two circuits.

Decision to abandon the Mississippi Valley came when five of the six member cities withdrew from the circuit at today's meeting.

Paul Lagomarcino, of Davenport; Ross Harriott, of Terre Haute, and Phil Barthelme, of the St. Louis Cardinal organization, were appointed to reorganize the new Three-Eye League.

Stephenson and Hack Sign '34 Cub Contracts

Chicago, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The Chicago Cubs announced today that Outfielder Riggs Stephenson and Infielder Stanley Hack had signed their 1934 contracts, and hastened to deny that Outfielder Babe Herman was a holdout.

"If Herman is a holdout," said President William Walker, "we know nothing about it. His contract was mailed January 15 and we haven't heard anything from him. I don't anticipate any trouble signing Herman or any other members of the Cubs."

Fair Grounds Races Will Include Sundays

New Orleans, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—A regular Sunday program of races will be run at Fair Grounds during the 46-day meeting which opened today, according to an announcement by the Crescent City Jockey Club, operators of the track.

The meeting is scheduled to close Tuesday, March 17.

Temple Cards Vanderbilt.

Philadelphia, Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Announcement of a football game with Vanderbilt University for the 1935 season was made today by Earl R. Yeomans, director of athletics at Temple University. The tilt will be played on Friday, October 11 here.

The game will be the first athletic activity ever scheduled between the two institutions, and brings together Dan McGugan, one of the outstanding coaches of the South, and the "Old Fox," Glenn S. (Pop) Warner.

Zorana Sets Track Record in Winning Feature as Tropical Meeting Closes

$9.30 Victor Is Home in 1:10 3-5

Salut D'Amour Pays $33.90; Quick Step Scores in Third.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—The Gables Racing Association, headed by the affable Bill Dwyer, offered a nicely balanced getaway program here today as its early winter meeting came to a successful conclusion. The official family of the intimate little course along Bird road expressed much satisfaction over the results of the current session and looked forward to even better prospects for its second meeting. The sport returns here following the close of Hialeah for the seasonal wind-up.

The Palm Isle purse attracted one of the fastest sprint fields of the meeting. The 6-furlong track record held by Don Romiro toppled when Mrs. T. Hunt's Zorana, ridden by the Calgary, Canada, apprentice mite Eddie Litzenberger, ran the three-quarters in 1:10 3-5, a fifth of a second better than the former mark.

Judge Schilling Second.

Incidentally; it was the last race of the meeting at that distance. Fred Kraft's veteran, Judge Schilling, the choice, was a fast-closing second, two lengths behind and three parts of a length before Mrs. C. M. Henderson's Flying Sailor. Zorana returned $9.30 straight.

The 16-year-old Litzenberger used good judgment in guiding Zorana home. He rated the filly perfectly behind the suicidal pace cut out by Flying Sailor. The latter began to get groggy heading for the stretch and Zorana was sent to the front. Judge Schilling, slow to begin, made up ground fast on the outside, but Zorana was safely home.

Neon Sets Pace.

Idle Victory drew a heavy play in the opening dash for maiden 2-year-old fillies and a poor start deprived the daughter of Victorian of victory. Neon, well played second choice, broke well, set the pace and held on long enough to beat Idle Victory by a half-length. The latter was rushed up fast and was wearing the winner down rapidly. Canobie Lake was an easy third all the way, losing the place by three lengths. The winner paid $5.50.

Another bad start marred the second race. Zion was left and O'Neil, the favorite, might as well have been. The winner turned up in Salut d'Amour, which maintained a wide lead all the way, to click by four lengths, at $33.90 for $2. Heiress, never far away, put up a strong finish and was up in the final strides to head Suspicious for the place. Suspicious weakened from chasing the winner.

Quick Step Winner.

The combination of Earl Porter and Quick Step broke the ice for form players in the third. Nothing in the race could keep up with their race, Quick Step completing the mile journey a length and a half clear of the King. The Gen forced the pace into the last furlong, where he gave way to the King, which had a five-length advantage for the place. Lucky Jack never could get up and tired. Quick Step paid $4.50.

James River, dropped back into 6-furlong competition, hauled 118 pounds to an easy score in the fourth. Silvio Coucci brought the gelded son of St. James from behind to beat Cabouse by three lengths going away. Blackmock closed to be third. Cabouse got to the front on the last bend but he was no match for the $4.10 favorite when Coucci made his move.

Double for Gallagher.

W. H. Gallagher posted a double when his colt, Moralist, proved a handy winner of the sixth contest. The Son of Crusader beat General Court by a length, with Fairly Wild, an alleged good thing, third, four additional lengths away. Moralist overtook Steel turning out of the backstretch and after opening up a safe lead, staved off General Court's stretch challenge to pay $5.60. Lone Hand, a recent winner, ran a disgraceful race and finished last.

Grayback, at the liberal odds of $21.40 for two, won the finale by a nose from Rego, with Lawless Lady beaten 5 lengths for the show.

Strange as It Seems

—By John Hix

Pope Alexander VI divided the New World between Spain and Portugal by drawing a line north and south from pole to pole to pass 100 leagues west of the Azores and Cape Verde Islands, in May, 1493. To Spain he gave all yet undiscovered and unexplored lands not then in the hands of a Christian ruler lying west of the line. Portugal was given all land to the east.

King John II objected to this division, asking that the line be moved farther west. After a conference of Spanish and Portuguese ministers in 1494, it was agreed that the line of demarcation be set 270 leagues farther west. The pope issued an order to this end. By terms of this division Portugal received a generous slice of South America, including what is now Brazil. It has since been suggested, and there is evidence upholding it, that King John's navigators had made a secret trip across the Atlantic and had discovered Brazil without making known the discovery.

Strange as it seems, France, England and the Netherlands were the principal colonizers of North America, although none was recognized in the papal order. These three powers paid no attention to Pope Alexander's division of the world.

Woodberry Defeated By Randolph-Macon

Woodberry Forest, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Randolph-Macon Academy, of Front Royal, defeated the Woodberry Forst five here today, 32 to 22. The ragged playing and wild shooting of the Orange team kept it in trouble throughout the afternoon. On a long shot by Pyre, the hustling visitors went into the lead in the early stages of the second quarter and remained in front from that point on.

Pyre was high scorer for the contest with 12 points.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Jan. 24.

A new deal tomorrow. Mr. Widener throws open the gates of his $2,000,000 racing layout and among the 12,000 or so who will ankle into the establishment will be your friend, Shutout Bennings. After what has taken place during the past two days, I may be disguised as the three-quarter pole, a narcotic agent, a hard-boiled egg, or Jockey Noboy Jacobs. Although I didn't hear from him today, I believe Clocker Mike was around putting the jinx on me. Looks like a big meeting here. The hotels and apartments on the beach are bulging with customers and many of the nearby towns are loading up with the overflow. And the winter is young yet as far as this neck of the woods is concerned. BILL.

First race—Flaghorn was fairly good as a juvenile and is asked to go a mile in only ordinary company tomorrow. His works have been good and I'm going to try to make him beat Off Duty, Escadron and the others.

Second race—Abner has had a lot of education and appears due to graduate among these. Failed me before, but has not had the best of racing luck. Back Fence comes highly recommended and will draw plenty of play. Query to take care of the others.

Third race—It's hard to laugh off Fredeick. He is speedy and will appreciate the lightning-fast strip. Longford is due to wake up. This may be the occasion. Crowning Glory for the minor award.

Fourth race—If the handlers of Aunt Flor elect to start her here instead of the feature, I look for a victory. She has a way of stepping home at unexpected moments. The Bradleyite, Boy Valet, breaks off the rail and is the one to beat. Open Range for the show end.

Fifth race—Quel Jeu gets 14 pounds from Springsteel and some weight from most of the other stars in this sprint. Has been giving the clockers an eyefull of late and I'm going to take a chance. Springsteel gets a heavy assignment. Evergold has shown plenty of speed in Florida and should make a money appearance.

Sixth race—Merrily On turned in a real effort last out and goes right back for me tomorrow. Stealing Away and Blessed Event both pack much punch. However, the top one can't make any mistakes, but will be there if capably ridden.

Seventh race—Fingal appears to have found a spot in the final. His last indicates that he is at tops now. Olamay might get in the pay at long odds. Fleet Flag is consistent and dangerous.

Stocks Drive Higher in Spite Of Profit Sales

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Stocks went ahead again today and in larger volume, though profit-taking, especially toward the close, tended to hold down gains. The market average rose half a point, putting the closing composite of 90 issues at 88.3 which compares with July's peak of 96.9.

Rails came forward under a good head of steam, rising 1 to 3 points before realizing reduced the momentum. Some chart followers regarded this demonstration as significant on the theory that the carriers were "confirming" previous rallies by the industrials which now are but slightly more than 2 points under their average top of last summer.

Utilities flurried a bit; activity was noted in some of the lower priced issues in this section without much price change.

Steel Stages Rally.

Steels paid little attention to the rather negative mid-week trade reports on that industry, and rallied moderately well. Motors pushed upward during the afternoon, with Chrysler, Hudson and General Motors prominent.

An extra dividend of $1 on the Liggett & Myers issues helped tobaccos; the stocks directly affected gained a couple of points net. Aircrafts improved and baking and amusement shares found buyers. Sales increased to 3,369,180 shares, about a million more than yesterday.

Wall street had no doubts as to the success of the new Government financing. The 2½ per cent rate on one of the forthcoming issues is perhaps a little higher than had been looked for here, but of more interest was the fact that the offerings are to be placed in the orthodox manner.

Banking institutions, of course, will take most of the securities, which appear at a time when excess reserves of Federal reserve member banks are approaching the billion-dollar mark.

Business Holds Attention.

Business news of one sort or another, as well as prospects over the near term, held the attention of market quarters. Iron Age reported a let down in steel production due partly to absence of expected support from railroads, construction industries and the automobile manufacturers.

The last-named consumers, however, should be releasing larger tonnage in the next fortnight, the review thought. Estimates of February motor-car output are rosy, one forecast being that the total will approximate the 260,000 unit volume of last June, which was the best month of 1933.

Electric power output in the past week was slightly under the previous week, and the gain over a year ago shaded to 9.5 per cent from 10.1.

Loadings Change Little.

Freight loadings statistics indicated little change, although they suggested that some further improvement had been recorded last week in comparison with the immediately preceding period.

Pennsylvania Railroad's 50-cent dividend was not designated as a "regular," the same amount was paid a year ago, and today's action maintains the road's record of having paid something in every year of its long history. Pennsy's participation in Norfolk & Western's extra amounts to 9 cents a share on the Pennsylvania stock; the later was up a point at the best.

In general, net gains were fractional. U. S. Steel preferred, on which another 50-cent dividend is expected next week, came within a shade of par while the common had an extreme rise of about a point. General Motors and Chrysler rose one and two, respectively, before dipping from the highs. General Electric was up a major fraction net. Southern Railway and Southern Pacific were well supported. Santa Fe lost most of a 2-point rise.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Professor Rogers Is First to Admit Publicly That the Gold Bill Will Result Not Only in Uncontrolled but Uncontrollable Credit Inflation.

By Ralph West Robey.

From one point of view, at least, it is probable that the testimony of Prof. James Harvey Rogers was the most significant of all that given on the hearings on the gold bill. Other witnesses perhaps showed a more profound grasp of the problem involved, and certainly most of them showed far more concern over the probable outcome of enacting such a bill. It remained for Prof. Rogers, one of the President's own advisers, however, to rip away all surplus verbage and say that this measure gives "almost complete assurance of early of uncontrolled, but of uncon- This is, I believe, the first time a member of the Administration has admitted publicly that we are headed in the direction not only of uncontrolled, but of uncontrollable inflation.

In order that Prof. Rogers will not be unduly disturbed by my putting these laurels on his head—he is reputed to be quite sensitive about the way newspapers treat him—one should hasten to add that later in his prepared statement he apparently denies the above conclusion. In summerizing the effects of the bill, "as an economical measure," he says that it provides "ample control over the use of this (gold) profit, so that any resulting inflation can be restricted." If one may paraphrase the professor's own poetic comment about the source of the gold profit, however, "literally out of thin air does such a conclusion appear." There is nothing in the body of his argument to support such a view.

Argument Is Based Upon Excess Reserves.

The argument by which he arrives at the conclusion that the expansion will be uncontrollable is the familiar one of excess reserves. To understand this line of reasoning, it is necessary merely to recall that under our laws every bank has to keep a legal reserve of a stipulated percentage against its deposits. In the case of all banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System, this reserve must consist of deposits with a Federal reserve bank. The excess reserve of any individual institution is the amount by which its deposit with the Federal reserve bank exceeds the amount required by law. In the banking system as a whole these excess reserves today amount to between $900,000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

Prof. Rogers' first point is that through a devaluation of the gold the Government accumulates new funds. Then, he goes ahead to say, "once paid out, these new funds, whatever their form—either new notes, gold certificates or simply a Government deposit in the Federal reserve bank—flow to the reserves of the commercial banks." In consequence, if one assumes "to take an extreme case, that $3,000,000,000 of gold profit were paid out and thus flowed to the excess reserves of the bank" we would end up with a total excess reserve of close to $4,000,000,000. Prof. Rogers, through using $750,000,000 as the present excess reserve that can be counted on, places the aggregate at $3,750,000,000.

Is Held a Multiple Expansion Possible.

On the basis of these reserves there may be, according to this monetary adviser, "a loan and deposit expansion of four to ten times." In other words, with $3,750,000,000 of excess reserves we could have a credit expansion of from $15,000,000,000 to $37,500,000,000. The professor, however, sees a possibility of considerably less than this expansion. This is because the Federal Reserve System has, by his figures, some $2,000,000,000 of assets (they are Government bonds) which might be used to "wipe out" or "mop up" such excess reserves. This would be done by selling such Government obligations and charging the account of the member banks.

In other words, there is a possibility that the Federal Reserve might exercise some control over such credit expansion as would result from $2,000,000,000 of the $3,750,000,000 of excess reserves. Beyond the $2,000,000,000 mark, however, the system is completely impotent as a credit-controlling organization. This leaves an amount then of $1,750,000,000 of "nonwithdrawal base for a loan and deposit expansion." This should give us, according to Rogers, "at least $7,000,000,000 and more likely" $17,000,000,000 of expansion.

It is this $7,000,000,000 to $17,000,000,000 that is the uncontrolled and uncontrollable inflation that that professor sees as the almost inevitable result of the current monetary policy. It seems to me that he, as the first member of the Administration who has been willing to-admit that we are headed toward uncontrollable inflation, deserves commendation.

Goods Market.

New York, Jan. 24 (A.P.).—Gray cotton goods were firm today with some advances being asked on a basis of 7 cents for 38½-inch 64x60s print cloths. Sheetings prices are being revised irregularly upward. Finished goods are in steady demand. Rayon fabrics are more active, with 100 denier lines scarce. Silks were more active for the day and some prints were scarce for quick delivery. More business is coming forward on worsted dress fabrics. Burlaps are unchanged.

Bonds Resume Upward Push; Volume Rises

Trading Turnover Climbs to $19,711,000; Rails Head Advance.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—The bond market, finding the Government's new billion-dollar financing terms were about in line with expectations, resumed its upward push today and the trading volume expanded some early hesitancy.

Sales totaled $19,711,000, par value, against $17,009,000 yesterday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues recorded a net gain of four-tenths of a point. The average for 20 selected industrials also edged up to a new 1933-34 high.

While the U. S. Government list showed a turnover of only some $1,100,000, prices here were steady to firm. Although the Libertys First and Fourth 4¼s eased a trifle, gains of 1-32 to 7-32 of a point were in the majority.

Interest Rates Liked.

The financial district apparently liked the interest rates of 2½ per cent on the Treasury's new $500,000,000 13½-month notes and 1½ per cent on an equal amount of 7½-month certificates and oversubscription was taken as a matter of course.

As probably 90 per cent of the new funds will be subscribed in the form of book credits by banks, little effect on the money market was expected.

It was thought in some quarters that the Treasury could have had a lower rate than the 2½ per cent on its longer-term offering, but, in view of additional heavy financing over the next few months, banking circles believed the slightly higher figure was advisable at this time.

Rails Made Best Showing.

The rails made the best showing among corporation bonds. The more active gainers of 1 to 3 or more points in this section included some loans of Alleghany Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Rock Island, Cuba Northern, Denver & Rio Grande. Erie, Great Northern, M-K-T, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Southern, Wabash and Western Pacific.

Among the firmer utilities and industrials were issues of American Telephone, American Rolling Mill, Consolidated Gas, Goodyear, International Mercantile Marine, McKesson, North American Edison, Pennsylvania Power, Philadelphia Co., Remington Rand, Tennessee Electric, U. S. Rubber, Warner Bros. and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Foreign obligations were steady to firm. Bonds of Brazil, Bolivia, Chile, France, Lautaro Nitrate and Royal Dutch advanced 1 to more than 3. The Germans were somewhat irregular and British loans eased.

Cotton Reacts Again Under Liquidation

January Closes at 11.06 as General Market Drops 2 to 7 Points.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Cotton prices moved narrowly in quiet trading today. An opening advance was followed by reactions which carried the price of May from 11.36 to 11.23 in the late trading under liquidation and scattered selling. That delivery closed at 11.25, with the general market ending barely steady at net losses of 2 to 7 points.

First prices were 4 to 7 points higher on overnight buying orders through trade and commission house sources. Later the market turned easier under some liquidation through houses with Wall street connections.

Selling became more active late in the afternoon, while the buying was chiefly covering or on scale-down orders from the trade. March eased off from the early high of 11.21 to 11.10, while July declined from 11.51 to 11.40, and closing quotations were within a point or two of the lowest.

Exports today, 13,091, making 4,798,068 so far this season. Port receipts, 17,962. U. S. port stocks, 3,872,123.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was a shade easier today under liquidation, promoted by the easiness of lard and hogs and the setback in cotton. Final prices were unchanged to 3 points net lower. Sales were 9 contracts, 7 of which were in the July position. Bleachable spot nominal; January, closed 4.65; March, 4.78; May, 4.93; July, 5.15.

Wool Prices Hold Firm; Market Quiet

Boston, Jan. 24 (AP).—The Commercial Bulletin says:

"There has been rather more business in wool over the past week or ten days, although it has not reached large proportions. A little business in tops and yarns, consequent upon the award of Government contracts, was given out last week, but coverage against this business has tapered off again.

"Prices keep generally firm, although evidence on this score is somewhat contradictory.

"The foreign markets are a bit easier at the week-end than they were at the commencement of the week, although still considerably above domestic market parity.

"There is still a great deal of congestion in manufactured and partly manufactured goods, although shipping orders on yarns and tops are said to be a very little better.

Domestic Ohio and Pennsylvania fleeces: Delaine unwashed, 35@37; half-blood combing, 36@37; three-eighth-blood combing, 42@43; one-fourth-blood combing, 41@42.

Commodities In Week Rise 1.53 Points

New York, Jan. 24.—A sharp increase in the Daily Weighted Price Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., took place following the gold and currency message sent to Congress early this week. On Monday, January 15, the index jumped to 104.48, the highest level reached since September 18, 1933. A slight reaction developed on succeeding days, bringing the index on Thursday, January 18, to 104.01, or a gain of 1.53 points over the same day of the preceding week, and of 5.09 points over the corresponding date of last December. On the like date of January, 1933, the index stood at 68.44.

Comparing Thursday's quotations with the same day of last week the following items showed advances: What, flour, rye, lard, coffee, butter, hogs, lambs, cotton, silk, rubber, copper, zinc, silver and steel scrap. Oats, steers and coke, on the other hand, declined.

Following is tabulated the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Weighted Price Index of 30 basic commodities compiled from quotations furnished by the United Press since December 1, 1933, and December 2, 1932. (1930-1932 equals 100.

State Bond Issues Oversubscribed

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Two State bond offerings were made in the New York market today and drew a large number of bidders who oversubscribed the issues several times.

A $50,000,000 issue of New York State 2 per cent one-year notes was more than three times oversubscribed, and an offering of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts amounting to $8,453,000 water and relief bonds attracted four large syndicates.

Seventy-seven banks and investment houses entered bids for $176,200,000 for the New York State issues, the books for which were left open only a few hours. The amount of allotments ranged from $100,000 to $1,500,000, and awards are expected to be made later.

A syndicate headed by the First of Boston Corporation was awarded the Massachusetts issue on its bid of $100.71 per $100 bond for $3,000,000 metropolitan water bonds bearing 3¼ per cent and $100.499 per $100 bond for $5,453,000 relief bonds bearing 3 per cent. The water bonds mature from 1935 to 1964. Of the relief bonds, $5,000,000 run for an average of 2⅝ years and $453,000 for 5¾ years.

Paris Fixes Quota For U. S. Imports

The French import quotas for the first quarter of 1934 for imports from the United States of certain meats and condensed milk have been fixed as follows, according to a cablegram from the American Embassy at Paris:

Frozen pork, 10 metric tons; meats, salted or in brine, uncooked, not prepared, including hams, 154 metric tons; sausages, salamis, &c., 8.8 metric tons; and condensed milk without sugar, 18.8 metric tons.

With the exception of the above quota for salted or pickled meats, which is increased from 104 to 154 metric tons, these quotas are the same as the full amounts in previous quarters, in accordance with the French note of January 6.

The following directors were elected: Durand W. Springer, Wilton J. Lambert, Ellsworth C. Alvord, H. Rozier Dulany, jr., Frank B. Severance, Rowland C. Ringgold, Francis J. The board of directors reelected the following officers: Charles Delmar, president; Francis J. Crilley, vice president, and William Jeffries Chewning, jr., secretary and treasurer. The board appointed John H. Verkouteren auditor, and Donovan, Bond & Alvord general counsel for the corporation.

Interwoven Mills Resume Full Time

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Interwoven Mills here, which has been operating on a three-day weekly work schedule for the past five weeks, Monday resumed its normal schedule of five days per week, for a total of 40 work hours per worker.

The three-day week was begun five weeks ago as a part of a nation-wide move by men's hosiery mills under the industrial code to cut down the surplus in hosiery that was seen piling up at that time. The understanding was that if the five weeks of the three-day scheme did not reduce the surplus sufficiently, it would be continued another three weeks.

(Associated Press.)

Cotton of the growth of 1933 ginned prior to January 16 was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau to have totaled 12,558,762 running bales, including 592,054 round bales, counted as half bales, and 6,792 bales of American-Egyptian, and exclusive of linters.

To that date a year ago ginning totaled 12,414,899 running bales, including 666,036 round bales and 7,402 bales of American-Egyptian.

The ginnings in running bales by States this year to January 16 were:

Alabama, 950,170; Arizona, 85,787; Arkansas 1,006,079; California, 191,745; Florida, 23,470; Georgia, 1,090,726; Lousiana, 468,565; Mississippi, 1,130,244; Missouri, 231,504; New Mexico, 85,522; North Carolina, 684,475; Oklahoma, 1,224,801; South Carolina, 723,886; Tennessee, 425,170; Texas, 4,190,174; Virginia, 33,636; all other States, 12,808.

Canada's Sale Of Farm Tools Is Decreasing

A remarkable decline in the sale of heavy farm machinery in Western Canada is revealed in a report from the American consulate general, Winnipeg, made public by the Commerce Department.

A survey conducted by a Canadian farm implement journal and covering the last 15 years shows that sale of tractors in 1933 amounted to only 12 per cent of the 15-year average of 6,464. The peak of the tractor trade was reached in 1928, when more than 17,000 units were sold. In 1931 sales had dropped to 842, as compared with 9,100 in the preceding year. Sales in 1932 and 1933 were, respectively, 892 and 777 units.

The sale of combines and threshers followed a similar trend to tractors. From the peak of 3,657 combines sold in 1928, sales had dropped to 77 in 1933. Average combine sales in the eight-year period, 1926-1933, were 1,246 units. Sales of threshers in 1933 amounted to only 282 units, as compared with an average of 1,932 for the six-year period, 1928-1933.

Practically all of the tractors and the bulk of threshers and combines sold in Western Canada are of American origin. Local distributors of American farm equipment, it is pointed out, have recently been gratified at the improvement in the rate of exchange by which they are enabled to meet their obligations in the United States without having to pay the high premium for drafts in American funds which were demanded during the past two years.

Radio Waves and Ripples

A STRANGE friendship has sprung up between Aunt Sadie and our butcher.

Oh, we're quite sure its platonic and all that, for Aunt Sadie hasn't been the least romantically inclined since all those bricks fell on her young man from Hagerstown. And, as for the butcher, he has a wife and a half-dozen growing children of which he's inordinately fond.

It's just that—the wife and so many children, we mean—that makes the friendship of Aunt Sadie and the butcher just a little difficult to understand. Aunt Sadie has rather definite ideas about having children which we suspect originated with the sudden and sad demise of the young man from Hagerstown. As a charter member of Ridge Street Chapter, No. 2114, of the League for Fewer Babies, Inc., Aunt Sadie normally is repulsed when the number of one's children exceeds two or three, particularly if one happens to be a butcher.

THIS friendship of Aunt Sadie and the butcher has been bothering us for some time and it was only a few days ago that we stumbled across a bit of information that may be the solution to the mystery. Of course, it's merely a theory, but it does sound quite plausible.

Aunt Sadie, you may recall, is an Arlington time signal addict. She listens to them every day on that radio she brought from Perry, Mich.

Well, Cousin John says the butcher listens to nothing but police calls on his radio. The butcher told John he liked them better than Amos and Andy or Rudy Vallee.

For us, that explains everything, and we wouldn't be in the least surprised if one of these days Aunt Sadie traded in her set for a short-wave receiver. Nor would we be amazed to hear time signals as we walk past the butcher's some fine noon.

A martyr is Arthur Godfrey, WJSV Sun Dialist, to those beaming chaps whose delight is to sit through the night listening to far-away stations.

For Godfrey, with a fine disregard for the state of his health, means to stand before the microphone broadcasting records and chatter to them from WJSV's sign off at 1 o'clock Saturday morning until the conclusion of his Sun Dial program at 9.

If anyone tells our Aunt Sadie about this we'll probably shoot 'em. Likely as not, if she hears about it she'll sit up all night herself with the radio in full blast, just for the experience. She's like that.

Practically the only unsold time on Columbia's evening schedule was, until yesterday, the 9:30 to 10 period on Tuesdays, the spot in which N. B. C.'s Ed Wynn goes on the air.

Yesterday the time went to a sponsor for the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, beginning March 6.

Columbia feels that is the answer to the competition Wynn has been giving its sustaining artists.

While the Minneapolis Symphony probably may not distract many people here who are now listening to the Fire Chief, it will give a lot of us something to do between 9:30 and 10 p. m. Tuesdays.

Before going into the studio she gave everyone to understand that she wasn't at all like Mme. Schumann-Heink, who "ought to stop singing because her voice has worn out." She said when she got too old to sing she'd quit.

N. B. C. is broadcasting its first Presidential inauguration since March 4 Saturday night, which would be rather surprising news except that in this case the inaugural ceremonies are for William C. Murphy, jr., of the Philadelphia Public Ledger bureau here, newly elected president of the National Press Club.

Indiana's Governor, Paul V. McNutt, will be the principal speaker, the Marine Band will play and Tenor Theo Alban, of New York, will sing. Raymond P. Brandt, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch bureau, retiring president, will be in charge, and will introduce Murphy.

The ceremonies will go on the air from WMAL at 9 o'clock.

Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippine Senate, will discuss a new plan for island independence on WJSV tomorrow afternoon at 4. • • • WMAL is canceling the Navy Band's regular 11 a. m. broadcast today for Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring • • • but it's all right • • • the Army Band's being taken off the air temporarily Monday night and next Thursday morning.

I WAS JUST THINKING, MILLIE — I HAVE A LARGE CONSERVATORY AND GARDENS BACK ON MY ESTATE IN AUSTRALIA — WHY NOT TURN THAT INTO A BIG PLAY GROUND FOR OUR CHILDREN — AND MAKE OUR HOME A CHILD'S PARADISE —

NO! NO! I'D WANT TO GIVE MY CHILDREN EVERY HAPPINESS THAT MONEY OR POWER COULD BUY — CHILDHOOD IS THE ONE GIFT THAT IS GIVEN FREELY TO US ALL — AND WE LOSE IT SO QUICKLY — CHILDHOOD IS THE ONLY AGE IN A MAN'S LIFE WHEN HE CAN KNOW TRUE HAPPINESS —

A Logical Refusal

IT IS THE SACRED DUTY OF EVERY PARENT TO GIVE TO HIS CHILDREN THE LITTLE JOYS — THE TINSEL BAUBLES THAT COST US SO LITTLE YET FLASH AND GLITTER WITH A RADIANCE GREATER THEN THAT OF GOLD AND DIAMONDS IN THE THRILLED WONDERING EYES OF CHILDREN — THEN I THINK OF THE ONE CHILD ABOVE ALL OTHERS THAT DESERVE HAPPINESS — POOR LITTLE NELL — LIVING IN THE MYSERY AND POVERTY THAT I MIGHT HAVE SAVED HER FROM —

I KNOW, HONEY — EVEN IF YOU WANT ME ALONG, IT WOULDN'T BE FAIR TO YOUR AUNT ELLEN — WE'RE YOUNGSTERS AN' WE'VE KNOWN EACH OTHER SO MUCH LONGER — WE COULDN'T HELP WHOOPIN' IT UP AN' LEAVIN' HER OUT OF THINGS —

Walt Mason, Himself

Their Outlook.

The young man finds he's broke, and treats it as a joke; the world is his, and he may whiz, while people watch his smoke. His future lies before; great chances are in store; the clouds so gray will drift away, the sun will shine some more. If he is strong and fine, and well supplied with spine, he'll look ahead without a dread and never pause to whine. He knows that ne is young, his withers are unwrung, he will revive and keep alive however badly stung. Catastrophe appears, and calls for briny tears; but he has youth and is, in truth, the boss of coming years. With youth as a resource a man should keep his course and laugh at ills that bring the chills to old men weak and hoarse. The old man looks around upon his stamping ground, where he has wrought and planned and fought and finally been drowned. He says, "The dump is mine, I now take in my sign: I am too old the path to hold, too old to rise and shine. My future lies behind, I've done my beastly grind; my heartstrings break and I would take such rest as I can find." The hopeless old man gains some pity for his pains; but eyes grow hard and ears are jarred when tearful youth complains.
